THE OLD APPLE-TREE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
BY FRANK J. OTTARSON.

Here's the old tree where in childhood I sported,
When life was as fair as the blossoms it bore;
Where Jemima, my aunt, by a peddler was courted—
A good-hearted, neat and prim damsel of yore.

Ah! here are the names—oh, how many are sleeping!—
Of kindred and friends who have gone to the tomb;
And yet the old tree, like a mourner, is heaping
The earth that enwraps them with beauty and bloom.

In this season of light, when the spirit rejoices,
And the old apple-tree looks as fair as a bride,
I think I can hear every one of the voices
Of those who once sat on the bench by my side.

Each rudely-shaped letter some story can tell me;
This true-lovers' knot—I remember it well—
Was carved on the day when a great grief befel me,
The day when I parted from home and ma belle.

Returning at last to the home of my fathers,
I stand 'mid the blossoms that mock my decay,
While memory awakening the chill harvest gathers
Of loves and companions long vanished away.

Though the old apple-tree, where in boyhood I sported,
And the bench and the well are as then in their place,
The hearts and the faces whose greeting I courted
Have vanished, and I am the last of their race.

A DARK PLOT,
OR THE STEEPLECHASE AT CROYDON.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
BY JAMES WIGHT.

I.

"Ha, Landie dear! How long you've been! Just back from Croyden? Well, what are the chances? Better? Come, love, tell me all."

"Oh, bad, bad—devilish bad; not a ghost of a chance; it's a hare to a hedgehog—unless ——"

The scene was an extravagantly-appointed boudoir near Lancaster Gate, Bayswater. The chamber, like the woman who occupied it, was glorious in blue and gold. Costly knick-nacks, exquisite pictures, Oriental stuffs, silks and satins decorated the room. The woman was superbly attired in blue velvet, relieved by rich lace at the bosom, while diamonds glittered over her like sparks of flame. She was a magnificent creature, below the medium size, with brown eyes and pale, golden hair, and moulded like a Grecian goddess.

The gentleman who had just entered was a tall, languid swell, with features that had grown prematurely sunken and haggard by the fast pace at which he had taken life. His complexion was sallow, his eyes were muddy, and, although he was still on the salad side of thirty, his hand shook when he helped himself to brandy.

"Yes, it's all over with me, as I have said. Wild Cherry hasn't a confounded chance. Everybody says so, and I know it. Well, I'm a dead chicken in the pit; but I suppose it must have come to that sooner or later. By Jove!" he cried, lowering his voice and dropping listlessly into an easy-chair; "I've had no cursed luck since—since ——"

"Since when?" she snappishly interrupted.

"I mean for a year or more," he mildly answered.

"But you surely don't blame me! How the devil could I help your confounded luck?"

"I wonder," he remarked as he lighted a cigar, "if such gentle amenities are at all common between lovers of a year's standing, like you and I?"

"What else can you expect? You shut me up for a whole day like a nun, and treat me like a pauper?"

Lord Orlando Twisleton laid back in his easy-chair and indulged in a hollow chest-laugh.

"Gad!" he cried, "that beats the deck! And it's only eleven months since I took you off the boards of the Folly!"

"If you talk to me about the theatre, I'll throw this bottle at your head!"

Lord Orlando Twisleton had been one of the least demonstrative admirers of Miss Delia Freke when she was turning half the heads in town as a beautiful burlesque "artiste" at the Folly. He had often purchased a three-guinea box, but he had not lavished expensive bouquets upon the blonde siren after the manner of other reckless young aristocrats. To use his own phrase, he had run "a waiting race," and he had secured victory in the moment of what appeared to everybody au fait in the matter inevitable defeat. The siren had been wise in her generation. Apparently, she had made up her mind to walk the narrow plank of prudence until she found a pecunious husband or a princely settlement. She refused neither gifts nor homage; but she did not permit herself to be seen in equivocal associations. Add to this discretion chic, an enchanting smile, perfect teeth and a charming voice, and it is not surprising that several highly connected young aristocrats made haste to dare parental wrath by offering her their name. Young Walter Beaumont, a wealthy landed gentleman of the Midland Counties, was one of the most infatuated of her followers. He was an honorable, good-hearted young fellow, fond of manly sports, and with ample means wherewith to gratify his tastes. But he was not stylish; his manners were flavored with the stable; his form was short, his face was florid, his hair was red, and his laugh was a prolonged and resonant bray. Delia tolerated him, but she hung fire when he talked about matrimony and the stables at Bywell Hall. Indeed, Delia didn't care a rap for horses or stables. She wanted money.

Lord "Landie" and Walter were very friendly in those days.

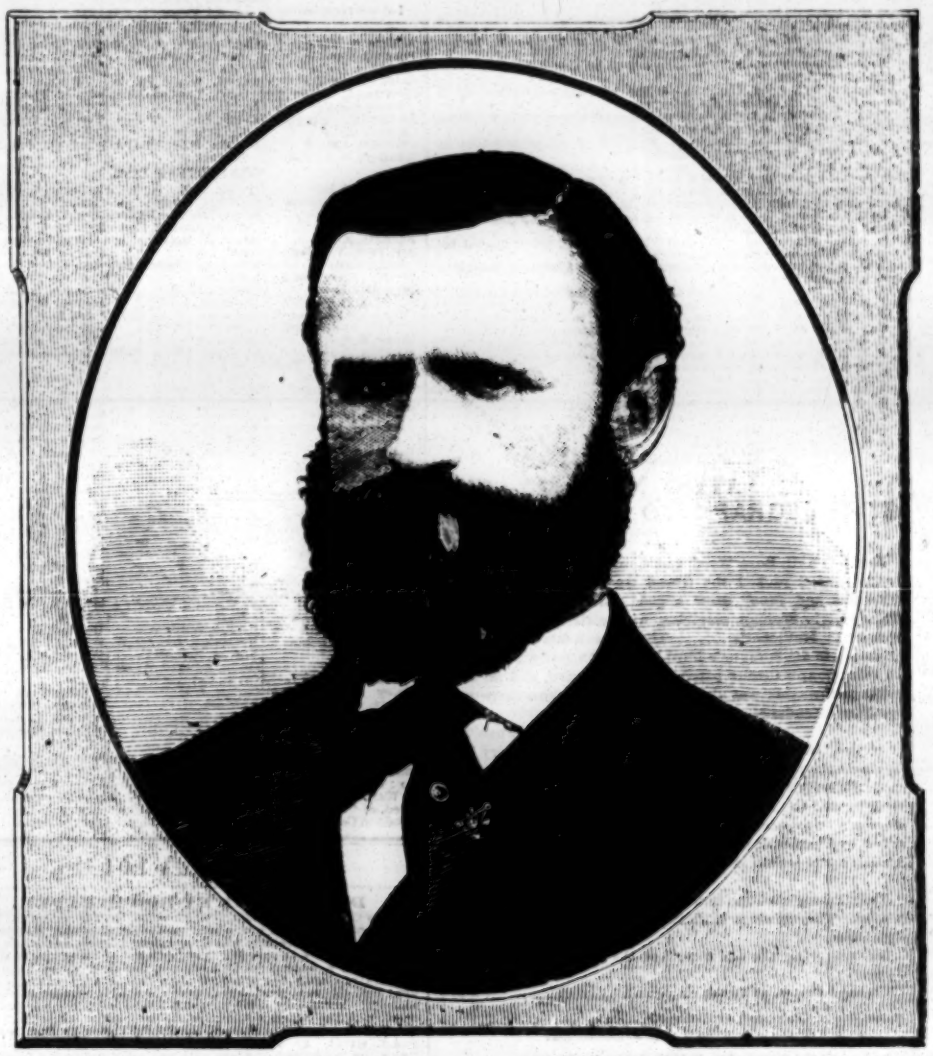
"Take care, Walt; she'll hook you and land you one of those days. She's an artful fox; don't you be fool enough to put your neck in the noose." Thus the young lord counseled the wealthy commoner.

"Tell you what, Landie, I've asked her to marry me, and, by George, I'll marry her to-morrow if she'll say the word. How's the colt?"

"Tip-top; never saw anything finer."

"I'll back The Zoo against him any day."

Plenty of money and perseverance will often subdue the most obdurate woman. One day Delia Freke, being in a pique with her manager, said she didn't care a row of pins if she did marry Walt Beaumont.



PROF. E. HAMILTON, CIRCUS MANAGER.

Next day he hitched up his coach and took her shopping in Regent street. As she alighted at the door of the mercer's store, she said:

"Call for me in an hour."

The carriage with Walt drove away. Delia had changed a thousand-pound note in payment of her expensive purchases, when Lord Landie lounged up to her:

"Hillo, Dele!"

"Oh, Lord Twisleton! You here!"

He began to talk to her with provoking coolness and impertinence, evidently knowing his woman thoroughly. The conversation ended by her accompanying Lord Orlando to the King-street door, just as Walt Beaumont's equipage was rattling along Regent Crescent on its way to the store.

From that day Delia Freke had occupied the gilded cage of the enervated prodigal. She termed herself "Lady Twisleton;" for Landie, as she called him, promised that some day she would bear that title and be presented at Court.

Henceforth, of course, the bitterest hostility existed between Beaumont and Twisleton, and this feeling had been carried into sporting—especially racing—matters. While Landie had been most unlucky since then, fortune's star had shone steadily on Walt. To sustain his extravagant and rapacious mistress, the lord had been compelled to seek succor from the Hebrews, while the gentleman was beginning to congratulate himself on his escape from the wiles of the siren. So exasperated had Twisleton become at Beaumont's series of turf successes that in a fit of madness he had backed his steeplechasing horse Wild Cherry against Walt's The Zoo for ten thousand pounds. The race was to come off on the day after the introduction of the Bayswater boudoir to the reader. The chances were desperate. Twisleton had borrowed money everywhere; he was, besides, over head and ears in debt; and he had backed Wild Cherry heavily over and above the stakes.

"Don't throw the bottle, Delia, darling—take a drink," said his lordship in a mollifying tone; "I want you to help me. You can save me from eternal smash—from being kicked into the clouds, as it were—and make the matter of five thousand for pin-money for yourself."

"Five thousand! How? Where? Tell me!"

The splendid lips had a cruel sensuality and the eyes a hard, speculative look now. He watched her closely, but with a studied air of carelessness, as he said:

"That fellow Beaumont—you remember him, of course."

She looked at him with silent, resentful wonder.

"He will ride his own horse to-morrow—nobody else can ride him over the Croydon course. The Zoo is a compendium of all animals; he is wilder than a chamois; he is fiercer than a tigress. He is the best steeplechaser with his owner on his back in England to-day; without his owner up, Wild Cherry can knock him into a cocked hat. Do you see my drift?"

"No; how can I? What do you mean?"

"Suppose Walt Beaumont was prevented from riding—suppose he were indisposed—that he overslept himself—or something, for instance!"

"But all that's a mere supposition."

"Suppose you turned it all into a reality."

"Ah! How?"

"By dropping down to Croydon and talking over old times to-night."

"I don't understand you?"

He got up and moved to a seat adjoining her. Although there was no one within hearing, they talked low. An hour had elapsed by the ormulu clock, when she said:

"All right, Landie dear! Kiss me! There! I must go and dress!"

II.

It was a beautiful October evening, with no appearance of rain. The ground would be neither too hard nor too soft on the morrow. The Zoo was sleeping soundly in his spacious loose box, undisturbed by any consciousness of to-morrow's contest. Walter Beaumont was standing at the stable-door talking to his head trainer.

"The Zoo's in tip-top trim, sir; never saw him better; eats, sleeps, exercises like a lamb. Bar accidents, he'll show Wild Cherry his heels to-morrow." Thus the trainer.

"By Jove, that's ten striking!" said Mr. Beaumont. "I must go down to the Royal; you'll be here all night, of course, Sanders; keep a sharp lookout. Twisleton's crowd are desperate—they'll stick at nothing. You have your pistols, haven't you?"

"Oh, yes, sir; I know the sort o' chaps I have to deal with."

When Beaumont was about to enter the Royal Hotel, at Croydon, a page handed him a tiny perfumed note. It was such an unusual occurrence in his experience to get a billet of the kind, that he turned it over in his hand and scanned it like a bumpkin. Opening it, he read:

MY WRONGED WALTER: I am in great trouble, as I deserve to be. Come to me. It is my last and greatest request, and I feel you will not refuse me. Once your own DELIA.
P. S.—Albemarle Parlor.

Nothing could exceed his astonishment. Instead of going into the hotel parlors, he walked outside and pondered. Lord Twisleton, the treacherous brute, mused Walt, had got into difficulties and kicked the poor thing overboard. That was the condition of affairs he felt certain as he again entered the house and sent up his card to the "Albemarle."

When he entered she arose and shyly advanced to meet him. There were traces of tears on her cheek. She was pale and beautiful, but calm and rather serious-looking. Over her shoulders was thrown a thin shawl that effectively concealed her voluptuous form. She smiled a sad welcome. He looked cold and impenetrable. She began by expressing the bitterness of her contrition for the injury she had done him.

"But I have left my betrayer," she continued in a stronger voice; "I am leaving England forever; but before I go I wanted to ask your forgiveness—I—I ——"

Here she burst into tears and covered her face with her hands. The shawl had fallen from those shapely shoulders, revealing their ravishing contour. He began to feel more interested, and, moving closer, placed his hand tenderly on her lovely arm, and said in simple, good-natured tones:

"Don't cry, Delia; I have no unkind feelings towards you; let's have a glass of wine, as we used to in old times."

In half an hour two bottles had been emptied, and Delia was all smiles and happiness. Poor Walt's control of himself was fast becoming problematic. She had placed her fine-shaped hand on his, and was telling him some stage experience with the swimming glance of which she had not miscalculated the power. Before he knew what he was doing, he had carried her hand to his lips. She immediately withdrew it. Love is blind, indeed, or it must have struck him that this woman was cool, self-possessed, playing a part, with speculation in her eyes.

"Let us have some more wine," said Beaumont.

"I would like Burgundy," she said, smiling. "Wouldn't you?"

While the waiting-maid brought the wine, she said:

"Don't you remember the old song?

"A bumper of Burgundy fill, fill for me!
Give to those who prefer it champagne!"

"Sing it, Delia, sing it!" he cried.

The wine was brought.

"Bumpers!" he cried; "and then a song!"

"Bumpers be it," she responded, filling his glass with her back towards him.

"Well, drink!" she said, as he stood up and presented her glass.

Both glasses were emptied at a draught.

"Take another!" she said.

"I will take a kiss!" he cried, trying to seize her.

She jumped agilely aside, and eluded him. He began to chase her about the room, but suddenly he sat down on the sofa. Then, as she looked, his jaw dropped, and, still muttering, he sank at once into a profound sleep.

"Poor Walt!" she said, bending over him. "It's too bad."

She loosened his necktie, placed a pillow under his head, and, hastily assuming her outer garments, stole downstairs to the ladies' entrance, and, hurrying to the railroad station, caught the last train to London.

But neither entreaties nor persuasions could induce her to return to Croydon to see the steeplechase next noon.

"It's the meanest thing I ever did in my life," she kept repeating; "and I cannot believe any good luck will follow it."

At night she was surprised when Twisleton did not return, nor telegraph. Finally, about half-past ten, she could endure the suspense no longer. Dressing herself, she called a hack, and drove down to the Victoria Club, in the Strand. At that resort, she reasoned, she would be sure to hear.

"Hillo, by Jove, there's Landie's woman; poor devil!" said one partially inebriated member to another more so on the club steps.

"Poor (hic) Delia! S-s-she'll'ave'ter-ter-ter (hic) masah-h some (hic) body else (hic)."

She had overheard the last groggy speech, and instinctively knew that something was wrong. In a few minutes she knew all. Beaumont had been found asleep in the "Albemarle" parlor of the Royal at nine o'clock by his valet, who had vainly endeavored to rouse him. The hotel physician had been called in, and, after trying the usual means, had pronounced him the victim of a narcotic drug.

Outside there was wild excitement. Betting men were frantic as ever-varying reports flew from lip to lip. At one time it was rumored that Beaumont was dying. Another rumor reported him as poisoned. One thing was certain—he couldn't ride The Zoo, and the race was as good as lost.

Meantime, by the doctor's aid, Walt was gathering himself together. It wanted an hour of the race.

"Lose or win, I'm going to ride!" he pluckily said; and then, in a grunted "aside," the doctor heard him say: "Curse that woman!"

Both horses came to the start in splendid form. It would have required more knowledge of the animals than was furnished by the eye alone to make a choice between them. They got evenly away together at a rattling pace, The Zoo appearing fuller of mischief than usual.

"Walt's knees are weak!" said the starter, "and the horse knows it!"

At the first serious fence Wild Cherry got awkwardly over, and nearly fell. The Zoo took the lead amid the cheers of his friends.

"The Zoo wins! Three to one—five to one on The Zoo!" The betting was three to two at the start.

Up the uneven stretch towards a bullfinch The Zoo was exhibiting temper, and when he made the leap his rider did not lift him neatly, and both horse and man were seen plunging into the water. Wild Cherry had cleared the lap finely, and was forging away ahead.

"Wild Cherry wins!" cried the bay's backers.

"I'll lay ten to one!" cried Twisleton, in the wildest excitement—"ten to one I'll lay on Wild Cherry!"

"Done!" "Done!" cried several bookmakers.

Meanwhile The Zoo was going along at a desperate pace, and Walt was plying the whip.

"He's mad," some of his friends said—"clean mad—there!"

The Zoo was running awkwardly and viciously, and Beaumont had nearly lost his seat. There were twenty lengths between them when at the next fence Wild Cherry had a mishap. They were again neck-and-neck. The Zoo's girths were seen to fly open, and Walt to grab the mane! Neck-and-neck! Neck-and-neck! Anybody's race, and Babel let loose. Then a roar as of the ocean breaking in a storm: "The Zoo wins!" "The Zoo has won!" Up fly the winning colors amid the mob of blanched and exulting faces. "The Zoo wins!" Hark! What was that? A pistol shot! There is a deep silence, as before the winds were made. The tidings travel fast. Lord Orlando Twisleton has liquidated his earthly obligations by a bullet through his brain.

Draw the curtain! Toll the bell! Mr. Beaumont has learned a lesson of man's perfidy and woman's treachery which he will never forget. And Delia? She married a professor of calisthenics in Paris, and it is whispered that he treats her shamefully.

PROF. E. HAMILTON

has been engaged in the circus business for the past twenty-one years. For ten years he ran a one-horse show, exhibiting a trick-horse called Sir Henry, the ensuing eight years an exhibition of Indians and a variety show, and the last three years the New York Circus. In the Spring of 1880 he bought out his former partner, and he is now the sole proprietor. Mr. Hamilton owns a farm of four hundred acres at Windsor Mills, Ashtabula County, O., and there he Winters his show and raises his own hay and grain for Winter consumption. In recollection of a debt of gratitude he owes to Sir Henry, the noble horse that laid the foundation of his master's fortune, he has erected on his farm a marble statue of the animal at an expense of two thousand dollars.

☞ QUESTIONS THAT DO NOT REACH THIS OFFICE UNTIL TUESDAY MORNING WILL NOT BE ANSWERED UNTIL THE FOLLOWING WEEK.

J. H. N., Montgomery.—Unless it has been otherwise agreed upon, no one but he who makes, takes up, orders up, or otherwise fixes the trump can go alone. The player who fixes the trump virtually tells his partner that he has a strong hand, and it would be a stupid partner who, were he permitted to go alone, would not with that knowledge try it on a hand that under other circumstances he would not expect to make three tricks with. While for this reason not one euchre player in a dozen will permit an assisted player to go alone, or the partner of one ordering up to go alone, there are some few who fancy that they gain something by playing in that way; and therefore it would be as well, before beginning to play, to have an understanding. If there is no special understanding, then it is to be held that an assisted player shall not go alone. To make sure that he shall not, some coteries agree that a player who says he assists shall play alone, whether he wants to or not.

A. L., Newourg.—1, 2, 3. We quote your questions to show you that you have got A betting in one case what in another he is betting cannot occur. You have also got B contradicting himself, and then betting that he is right in both cases. "1. A bets B that the Governor of any State under no circumstances can appoint a U. S. Senator. 2. A bets B that the Governor of this State (New York) can't appoint a U. S. Senator when the Legislature is not in session. 3. B bets A that he wins both bets." U. S. Senators must be chosen by the Legislatures of the different States. This is a requirement of the Constitution of the United States. 4. It is the duty of the stakeholder, in case no referee has been chosen by the bettors, and in case they refuse to choose one, to decide bets.

O. L. M., New Haven.—1. Hanlan was beaten by Ross, Riley, Ten Eyck, Plaisted and Gaudour in a race at Providence, R. I., June 17, 1880. 2. Hanlan was beaten by Plaisted, Frenchy Johnson and others in a regatta at Silver Lake, Mass., June 13, 1877; also at Boston, Mass., July 4, same year. On the former occasion he did not finish because, as was stated, an accident had happened to one of his outriggers, and in the latter regatta he was ruled out for fouling Plaisted and another. 3. They gave a purse for Hanlan and Courtney to row for, a purse for professional scullers and a silver trophy for amateurs at Providence, R. I., and a purse for professional scullers on the Thames River, England.

F. M. J., Lonsdale.—There is no suspension bridge between this city and Brooklyn. There is one building. For years there has been a temporary footpath, about one hundred feet above where the bridge will be, if it is ever finished; and across this temporary footpath, built for the purpose of facilitating the construction of the bridge, both men and women have for years been walking, first securing a permit from the bridge authorities.

ARUNDEL.—Section 1 of Rule 46 says that the batsman is out if he fails to take his position at the bat in his order of batting. A new rule was made in 1879 to the effect that after the first inning the first striker in each inning shall be the batsman whose name follows that of the last man who has completed his turn (time) at bat in the preceding inning. This interpretation of the rule seems to have been omitted from the official book during the last two seasons.

F. D., Chicago.—Both in the body of the report and in the full score it was stated that the only run in the game was made by Detroit. Had you begun to read at the beginning, instead of at the tail end, you could not have been led astray by an error that is none the less regretted by us because errors must occur everywhere—except in Chicago.

L. C., Holyoke.—According to your statement, you lose. If there were more than two horses in the race, you are to be held as having meant that the one named would not do so well as to get second money. If you meant otherwise, it was incumbent upon you to so say in unmistakable terms.

POKER.—1. If the player either looked at the faces of his cards or raised them before announcing that he had six and claiming a misdeal, his hand is foul, and the play is to go on without him. 2. When there is a call, all the hands involved must be shown to the board.

ACTOR.—The reported extraordinary time made by horses on the English turf fifty or one hundred years ago is fabulous. No official time was then taken on the English turf, and no official time is taken there yet. The time that is announced is anybody's time, and virtually no time at all.

J. C., Washington.—It was too late to claim a misdeal. Everything counts but points made by the side that played out of too many cards. As misdeals can be manufactured by non-dealers, especially in partner games, they are to be claimed before a card is played by the claimer.

A. S.—It is both billiard usage and common sense that in case a player offers to play "eight points or nothing" against an antagonist, he must make at least eight points in a run in order to count anything, even though one point would make him winner of the game. Your opponent is wrong.

Co. I, Third Cavalry.—There is no poll-tax in Buffalo, N. Y. We are furthermore advised from that city that it is to the writer's personal knowledge that there has not been one there in twenty years, and inquiries he has made lead him to believe that such a thing has never been known there.

ENGLEWOOD.—It seems to be wholly a question of veracity, with no preponderating testimony in behalf of either side, so far at least as has been submitted to us. Therefore, without giving a formal decision, we recommend that the game be adjudged null and void, and a new one played.

WASHINGTON HEIGHTS.—1. Yankee Sullivan was born in Ireland, stood 5ft. 10¾in. in his stockings, and weighed in his prime 158lb. 2. Call upon Mark Maguire, who resides on Eighth avenue, between One Hundred and Twenty-fifth and One Hundred and Twenty-sixth streets, and who can give you information about Sullivan.

H. H. K., San Francisco.—John C. Heenan and Jim Mace took a joint benefit at the Bowery Theatre, this city, Feb. 11, 1870, at which they first sparred together in public here. They subsequently appeared together at Tammany Hall.

C. R. A.—Ludlow street Jail is in Ludlow street, between Grand and Broome streets. It is above Grand. Passing the City Hall is a line of cars running through East Broadway that will take you within a short distance of it.

READER, Detroit.—The bet was upon games to be played that day. As it was baseball, games played next day, next week or next month would not answer. The bet is a draw, one of the clubs named by A having won, while the other did not play.

PITCH.—High, low, jack and game count out, and in that order, before any other point in the game that you call pitch, or sixty-one. Of the other points, that which counts the most comes next, and so on. A's game counted before B's nine-spot or three.

A READER, Washington.—It depends upon the nature of the "certainty." The mere fact that a man bets on what is popularly but erroneously called "a sure thing" is of itself no bar to his winning. If the "sure thing" is secured by fraud, then the bet is void.

H. M., Brooklyn.—B wins. Having 14 points, he necessarily had to have 6. If A meant no more or less, he had to say so in plain language when he bet. Betting that B would not hold 6 could be held only to mean that he would not hold so many.

J. A. B.—No such tie has occurred, and therefore there has been no such wager. Had there been such a tie, the exact cause or nature of it would have a bearing upon any decision we might give. The bet might be off, or B might win.

N. S. F., Middletown.—Force's portrait was given May 10, 1879, and Richardson's June 7 of the same year. We have also given the portraits of Jim White, James O'Rourke, Brouthers and Lynch of this year's Buffalo Club.

BARNEY, Warsaw.—As high as twenty-five thousand dollars in gold has been run for in a sweepstakes in California. It is possibly a sweepstakes you mean. We do not keep a record of the amount of stakes, sweepstakes and purses.

CONSTANT READER, Washington.—A player at fifteen-ball pool is winner of the game if he is 61, and has no more than two scratches, no matter how many balls are on the table. He can claim pool as soon as he is 64.

J. W. H. P., Fort Edward.—1. In case of a tie for game at seven-up, the non-dealing side count one for it. 2. The time as given, 33m. 5s., is correct. The water was rough, and Hanlan won very easily.

J. C., Peru.—In the third race for the O'Leary American belt, which took place at Madison square Garden, this city, Feb. 28 to March 5 last, Peter J. Panchot won, with a score of 341 miles 825 yards.

S. J. P., Providence.—Frank Hart won a 75-hour race, 12¾ hours daily, at Providence, Sept. 8 to 13, 1879. A. Elson was second and John Dobler third.

E. R. N., Wilkesbarre.—1. He has not retired from rowing, and the story to which you refer is bosh. 2. It is not probable that he will row a match with the party you name. 3. Wait and see.

NEW YORKER, Rochester.—1. Nothing better than applications of hot water. 2. Miller of the Red Stockings of 1878 is living in Cincinnati, disengaged.

DON QUIXOTE, Schenectady.—He was sentenced March 3 to ten years' imprisonment, and was taken from this city March 8 to Sing Sing, whence he was transferred to Auburn, N. Y., next day.

LYMAN, Albany.—1. A deal out of turn at whist stands good, if it is not claimed before the trump is turned. 2. It is not so with some other games.

D. F., Philadelphia.—Long Island has an average width of about fourteen miles and an extreme width of about twenty-three miles. Its length has been variously estimated as from 118 to 140 miles.

C. B. G., Mt. Pleasant.—The city of New York is not laid out in squares. Blocks here are not called squares. Possibly you meant to write something else.

A. L. AND F. J.—In a pool tournament for which there are ten entries, every one required to play five games with each other, the total number of games should be 225.

T. MCN., Mt. Morris.—A having made 61 and a "buck," and B 40 and a "buck," the former is winner of the game of pool. The two "bucks" offset each other, and are of no account.

S. D. AND T. MC., Chicago.—In the absence of any agreement to the contrary, aces are beaten by deuces, threes, fours, fives and sixes at poker dice.

J. MCH., South Pueblo.—1. Liverpool, Eng., has for quite a while been a city. 2. In England cities are usually made through becoming the seat of an Episcopal Bishop.

J. P., Binghamton.—Almost anything except tobacco and spirits can be sent from here and sold in England without a duty having to be paid thereon.

A. P., Boston.—1. See answers in amusement columns. 2. The order is high, low, jack and game. Jack made in play cannot under any circumstances go out before high or low.

DR. L. E. W., Martinette.—THE CLIPPER ALMANAC, which you can order through any newsdealer for fifteen cents, contains all kinds of sporting records.

ALBANY.—A wins. Holes in graveyards are not real estate. Their purchase is not recorded, they are not taxed, and no deed can be given for them in case the owner wishes to sell or transfer them.

H. C. P.—1. The striker would not be out. 2. Both men should be decided out. 3. The catcher can purposely miss the ball in order to make a double play.

EUREKA.—We cannot spare the space. Flint of the Chicagos and Bushong of the Worcesters had the best fielding averages in the catchers' positions for the seasons of 1879 and 1880, respectively.

J. M. R.—The Worcesters were tied with the Detroits for the fourth position on June 6, the Chicagos, Buffalos and Clevelands ranking above them.

RAX.—The Paris crew of St. John, N. B., was the champion four at that time.

LOUIS, Baltimore.—See records of jumping, etc., in CLIPPER ALMANAC.

W. A. H., Washington.—Read THE CLIPPER ALMANAC. We do not know the party to whom you refer.

A. J. R., Grass Valley.—Bill Poole defeated John Morrissey in a rough-and-tumble fight in this city in July, 1854.

S. E. J.—You were answered last week on page 205. Questions as to amusements are not answered in this column.

B. R., Momgona.—1. Tom Sayers and Jim Mace were never opponents in the prize-ring. 2. Tom King was born in London, Eng.

W. H. M., St. Louis.—We believe that the Messrs. Carlton of New York published some of them in book-form.

C. M. Y., Pittsburg.—You can order Bret Harte's works through the Pittsburg News Co.

W. F. H.—See answer to "A. L. and F. J." Explanation will appear next week. Crowded out this week.

F. L., Detroit.—Send to Ed. James, as per advertised address, for a price-list.

E. F. AND R. R.—A is right. B could not use any card on the board for the purpose of raising A's pile of seven to nine.

WHISKEY POKER, Springfield.—The "widow" is to be turned for B and C to pick a card from, if either wishes one.

C. AND S., Portland.—James and Michael Coburn are full brothers of Joseph.

FERNANDEZ.—Apply to the owners of racing stables, stating your experience and what qualifications you possess for the business.

KARDPLAYER.—Cassino is usually played twenty-one points up. It can be made any number, of course.

GREENWOOD, Boston.—The bet is a draw, as we recollect your question, which has been mislaid.

FIFTEEN-BALL POOL, Holyoke.—1. The ball was not pocketed. B stops playing. 2. He does not get a "scratch."

J. H.—B having 51 and a "scratch," and A 60 good, the latter wins. It is not necessary to hole the ten-ball.

P. K., Metropolis.—1. Excuse us. You had better advertise for it. 2. See answers in amusement columns.

BALTIMORIAN.—The cards in ling 4, 3, 5, 6, 4, there are a run of three for the 5, a run of four for the 6, and a run of four for the last 4.

ANXIOUS.—The ball must be fielded to the first-baseman. It is not necessary to return it to the pitcher in the case you mention.

BANKER, New Orleans.—W loses. A half-dollar of the year 1825 is worth no more than its face.

G. W. G.—It is wrong. He cannot look back at tricks played beyond the last preceding one taken in.

DEATHS IN THE PROFESSION.

NELLIE JOHNSON, wife of George W. Pike, manager of the National Theatre, Chicago, Ill., died at her residence, 385 Division street, that city, June 15, at 7.30 P. M., of rheumatism of the heart and general debility. She was born in the north of England in the Fall of 1838, and came to this country when about twelve years of age. Her maiden name was Helen Mathews. She was first married to George Johnson, the actor, but afterwards procured a divorce, and Nov. 22, 1877, in Cleveland, became the wife of George W. Pike. She made her debut at the Boston (Mass.) Theatre as a soubrette, and shortly afterwards attained considerable popularity in New York, where she became a favorite. She played an engagement in Nashville in 1865 and '6 under Duffield & Flynn, and for the following few years was engaged to do leading business under prominent stars in the principal cities of the country. Her last long engagement was three years with Bob Miles in Cincinnati. She appeared first in Chicago with the Wyndham Comedy Company, in 1870, at the old Dearborn-street Theatre, in leading parts in "Caste," "School," "The Lancers," and returned there to reside in 1877, immediately after her marriage with Mr. Pike. She at once became a favorite, and made her first hit as Marco in "The Marble Heart," following in Lucretia Borgia, and Moll Pitcher in "The Witch of Lynn." Her last appearance was as Gretchen in "Rip Van Winkle" at the National June 8. She was cast as Ogarita in "The Sea of Ice" at the Olympic Theatre June 13th, but on the 9th she was prostrated by her fatal sickness. She had been suffering for fully nine months past from rheumatic gout. The disappointment of not being able to fulfil her engagement hastened her demise. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Rowley of the Grace Baptist Church and the remains were deposited in Rose Hill Cemetry, the pallbearers being Samuel and Daniel Armitage, Frank Tannehill, John L. Hay, James H. Brown, and E. B. Marden. The floral offerings were numerous and magnificent.

WILLIAM SEYTON REDPATH, poet, actor, novelist and dramatist, died in Glasgow April 27 in his sixtieth year. In early life he became connected with the stage under the assumed name of George Mandale, and was considered to possess much histrionic ability. When Barry Sullivan acted Othello for the first time in Greenock, Mandale played Cassio. In 1863 he resigned a sub-editor's position to become acting-manager in the country to the late Edmund Falconer, with whom he was associated for several years.

MRS. CHARLES R. THORNE SR. died June 20 at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, in her sixty-ninth year. For several years past she had suffered from asthma, and by the advice of her physicians she went to Cornwall, it being their belief that the atmosphere there would have a favorable effect upon her malady. Miss Maria Ann Mestayer was born in Philadelphia. Her father was a low comedian and her mother a well-known actress. Miss Mestayer made her debut on the stage there as the child in "Pizarro." She made her first appearance in this city at the Lafayette Amphitheatre, in Laurens street, a little north of Canal, Aug. 31, 1825, dancing a pas seul. In January, 1830, she was playing in Blanchard's Amphitheatre (Chatham Theatre), being announced as Mrs. French, and in the following year she was at the Bowery Theatre. When Charles R. Thorne opened the Chatham Theatre, May 4, 1831, it being his first attempt at management, Mrs. French was of the company. During this year she was married to Mr. Thorne. When Richard Russell opened the Richmond Hill Theatre, Nov. 14, 1831, the company included Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Thorne. They next went to the Arch-street Theatre, Philadelphia, for a brief engagement, and subsequently Mr. Thorne took a company to the West Indies, his wife accompanying him. After playing there for some time they landed in Halifax, N. S., on their return, and gave a series of performances there. Feb. 18, 1833, they reappeared at the Richmond Hill Theatre, playing Carwin and Theresa in "The Orphan of Geneva," and the season closed with their benefit 27. In February, 1835, they reappeared at the Bowery. In 1836 they were engaged at the National Theatre, Boston Mass., under the management of Wm. Pelby, where they remained two seasons. For the season of 1838-9 they were at the Franklin Theatre, in this city. Mr. Thorne became comanager with Thomas Flynn of the New Chatham Theatre (afterwards Purdy's National) Feb. 3, 1840, and on March 9 became sole manager. At this time Mrs. Thorne was a prominent attraction. For her benefit, June 9, 1841, Mrs. Thorne and her sister, Miss Emily Mestayer, played Paul and Justin in "The Wandering Boys." Mr. Thorne retired from its management July 10, 1843. Subsequently a trip was made to South America. They played in Rio Janeiro, but did not meet with much success. After their return they played in Boston and some of the Western cities, and about 1850 went to California. Mr. Thorne managed the old American Theatre, in San Francisco, and later Mr. and Mrs. Thorne, with some of their children, played in all of the principal towns of that State. They next made a tour around the world, playing in Honolulu, Hong Kong, Shanghai, Yokahama, Calcutta, Ceylon, Aden, Cairo, Alexandria, etc., returning home by the way of England. They then played with their own company in many of the towns in the United States, and were the first to give theatrical entertainments in many of the towns in the West. They again visited California, and Mrs. Thorne took a formal farewell of the stage in the Metropolitan Theatre, San Francisco, April 12, 1864. Mrs. Thorne was endowed with a rare physical beauty, had a remarkably vivacious temperament, and was a good vocalist. These qualities enabled her to excel in the impersonation of soubrettes, while she gave much satisfaction in the portrayal of comedy and melodramatic roles.

BILLIARDS.

DEATH OF AN EX-ROOMKEEPER.

Harry Clifton died in this city last week. He was somewhat known in billiard circles, and was often prominent at public matches. As far back as 1861 at least he was an amateur player; and when in 1863 the writer of this, to save the heavy expense of being longer an amateur, leased a barless billiard-room in the then upper part of the city, Harry Clifton, the principal of an East-side school and a prominent East-side real-estate agent were about his only customers on the Sabbath. When they came the room would be locked up, and these three, with the lessee, would have the two tables all to themselves. Mr. Clifton was the barkeeper for Harry Foster at Broadway and Fourth street. About 1868 he became a roomkeeper, and so he continued for a number of years. He was seemingly a few years older than the age ascribed to him on his coffin-plate, and in his early days in this country, about 1850, when he worked as an assistant at an iron forge, he used to frequent the English sporting-house kept in Division street by the famous Johnny McGrath, and which happened to be next door to where the writer lived. It was there that Harry, having meanwhile become a barkkeeper, got his idea of one day opening an English chop-house. He was a plain, blunt, square man, and had made many friends and no more enemies than must come to every person of positive traits who lives a life of average years. His father left him sudden death as a legacy, and he himself was doomed to die suddenly. As a boy he was a Protestant, as a man he had a religion of his own that was broader than that of most sects, and at last he was buried in a Catholic cemetery. He was married many years ago to a lady who was attached to the same public-house in which he was then employed, and she and three children survive him.

MCLAUGHLIN DEFEATS ESTEPHE.—These Philadelphia experts contended at Estephe's room on the night of June 16 for the medal of the Philadelphia roomkeepers' championship at cushion caroms. McLaughlin won by 150 to 147. His best run was 10, and his average was nearly two points to the run. Estephe's best run was 11, with which he started his part of the game. A correspondent writes us "Estephe played with the wrong ball, but McLaughlin allowed him to go on and finish his run of 8, which made him 21 points ahead in the sixty-ninth inning." According to the score we have received, there was not a run of 8 made by either player. It is likely that if McLaughlin allowed Estephe to go on it was because he had failed to detect that the wrong ball had been used until Estephe had made his second shot with it, thus legalizing what would otherwise have been a foul.

STRAY SHOTS.

 Way once more for The Herald bureau of Paris: "Another great billiard match [Heaven save the mark! cries THE CLIPPER] was arranged here June 20 to take place on the 25th inst. Slosson and Piot will play Vignaux and Garnier at cushion-caroms for a purse of 5,000 francs [God help the poor! moans THE CLIPPER] at the Cirque d'Hiver!" Cushion-caroms! Why, the lads have become so bold that they are playing billiards in Paris flatfooted and baldheaded. But the result would have to be all the same if Slosson and Piot could "discount" Vignaux and Garnier at any game. The man who is the real challenger in these "internationals," sometimes sending for his opponent by mail and sometimes by cable, has to know, as we have always urged, just how he is coming out before he goes into a game—in France, at least.

 Sexton, Schaefer, Daly and Heiser were of a nine who made believe play baseball on the 22d inst.

 A note from G. H. Ellis, dated June 22, states: "Mr. Spencer has purchased the cue from A. R. Samuells of Brooklyn that he gave in 1868 for the billiard championship. It is a solid gold-mounted cue, in three pieces, and cost $150, with case. We are going to give it as first prize in a pool tournament open to amateurs only, commencing July 18, 1881. Entrance-fee, $3. All applications to be made to Geo. H. Ellis, 300 and 302 Bowery."

 John Flaherty will spend the Summer at Atlantic City, N. J.

 Advices from Albert Garnier are that he has leased the room of the Grand Hotel, Brussells, and will take possession on Sept. 1 next. The room has eight tables, and Garnier writes that he will probably have the Collender cushion put on every one of them.

 T. W. Wagner of Philadelphia has for some days been sojourning in Lancaster, Pa., on professional business.

 Five Collender tables have just been put into the Grand Hotel at Summit, Ulster County, this State.

 A pool tournament has just been concluded at Woodbury, N. J. A. Wilson won four games and lost six, as also did D. Dell and F. Dell; J. Trear lost six and won four; J. Murphy lost three and won seven; and T. Westcott lost seven and won three. The chief prize, a cue, was awarded J. Murphy.

 The Sunday Mirror of Philadelphia says that it is rumored that Edward McLaughlin is about to raise the price in his room to fifty cents an hour, and that Charles McGlade intends to charge a dollar an hour at his room in the Mansion House, Atlantic City, N. J.

 C. J. McGowen is now in charge at Estephe's, Philadelphia.

 The new law regulating pool-playing in this State went into effect June 20. It shuts out boys under sixteen years of age. It will be well if the law remains in its present shape.

 Eugene Day, formerly in charge of Brown's room, Chicago, is now at Mike Honahan's, that city, running pool.

 Thomas Fair and William Cullen were elected members of the National Billiard-players' Association at its last meeting.

 John Stock has left Chris. Bird's room and gone to Grubb & Marvell's, Philadelphia, in place of H. Aldin.

 John T. Reeves' new house in Leonard street is one of the handsomest in town. It is worth visiting, if only as a sight.

 Sandy Spencer's "Black Elephant" was open in all its enlarged proportions last Saturday night. The formal opening does not take place until to-night, June 21. Eleven tables will probably keep the elephant-tamer, Geo. H. Ellis, wide awake and busily hot.

 The brother-in-law of James Palmer of Philadelphia was buried in this city a few days ago.

 Chris. Bird has challenged Edward McLaughlin to test with him the speed of cushions. This for the cushion-carom medal.

 Holmes L. Coon, brother of the late John W. Coon, who a dozen years ago or more was a champion at the West, is now stationed at Vancouver Barracks, W. T. He writes that there are some very good players at that post, beside himself, and that the tables are well occupied during the day and up to ten o'clock at night.

 H. Ablin has left Philadelphia and taken charge of the room at Bryn Mawr Hotel, Bryn Mawr, Pa. As a supplement to the four tables put in there last Summer, two Collender Narragansetts have just been added.

 Jacob Yager, roomkeeper of Philadelphia, is in Jefferson Hospital, that city, suffering with dropsy.

 Some of the Chicago rooms would like to invalidate that rule of fifteen-ball pool which permits a player to use the butt of his cue and jam the cue-ball against the object-balls. Sundry roomkeepers there have decided to call such a stroke foul. More anon.

 The J. M. Brunswick & Balke Co. say that they were never before so crowded as at present. They are authority for the statement that on June 17 they were 307 tables behind their orders. The house they have just established in Buffalo, N. Y., is the eighth of their main offices, and they claim forty-three branch houses, with agencies without number.

 Joseph T. King, who is in charge of the tables at Harry Miner's room, this city, on the 19th inst. pocketed the whole fifteen balls off the burst, and in the two opposite corner pockets. Our Informant thinks that this extraordinary feat was never accomplished before. This is a mistake if by the two opposite corner pockets are meant the two pockets at the foot of the table. The wonder is that on the seven-up tables now in use some expert does not once in a while pocket the whole fifteen balls in one pocket.

 Slosson and Vignaux played at the rooms of the Paris Jockey Club on the 15th. This international match was certainly for money, for the Jockey Club furnished it. The experts started to play 1,000 points up, but they quit at 600, when Vignaux was a few points ahead. Thus Vignaux wins another "international match." He would have been ahead all the same had they played the full 1,000. Supper followed.

 Eisemann's room, in the Bowery, is to be altered throughout. The floor above is to be fitted up for circus and other professionals. Plate glass is to be put in the front.

 Yank Adams gave an exhibition at Joseph Gleason's room on the night of the 20th, and on the 22d he is to play at a new room in Broome street.

 Sexton's motto now is "Every man his own barkeeper," and he has taken off his coat.

THE RING.

SULLIVAN vs. RYAN—THE CLIPPER'S POSITION.

The party who has announced his readiness to find the money for Paddy Ryan, in his proposed barehanded P. R. contest with John L. Sullivan, last week, in the absence of the proprietor of this journal, left at the office a certified check for five hundred dollars in support of a challenge on behalf of the former for five thousand dollars a side. Upon Mr. Queen being advised concerning the matter, he directed that the check be returned to the depositor, with notification that the challenge could not appear in THE CLIPPER nor the match be made in this office. Convinced as we are of the almost utter impossibility of bringing to a satisfactory conclusion any match between men of note to fight in the old-fashioned way, and being unwilling that the columns of this paper should be used to further the plans of those who may in the future, as others have in the past, make matches which they do not expect will be decided on the merits of the men, but out of which they hope to obtain some of the public's dollars, it has been decided for these and other reasons that hereafter no challenge from anyone to engage in a regular P. R. contest shall be published in this paper, and that no money shall be received here for such purpose. All those interested in matters of this kind will please bear this in mind, as it is a rule that will not be departed from.

engaged in a very lively glove-contest in Wendel's Assembly Rooms this city, on the night of June 20. Ordinary boxing-gloves were used, the men stripped to the buff, and from the start nothing but downright hard fighting was done, Cash having the best of the hitting, and administering considerable more punishment than he received. The first round was ended by Moore being knocked off the stage by a hard right-hander on the head, and in one of the subsequent rounds he went off again, this time from a push. He tried hard to be even with his man, and planted some very ugly hits, which had their effect, and the affair closed in favor of Cash, the captain of the precinct stopping it at the end of the fourth round. Between one and two hundred spectators were present, and they went away well satisfied, although they wanted more of it, and both combatants were anxious to give them all they wished, but the powers that be wouldn't have it. Moore received a nasty cut over the left eye, from which the red fluid flowed freely. There were several preliminary set-tos.

CLEARY VS. DONOVAN.—The card in last week's issue over the signature of Mike Donovan has elicited a reply from Mike Cleary, from which we extract the following, which is the last allusion to their quarrel which will be inflicted on the readers of THE CLIPPER: "He never did anything for me that he was not well paid for. He does not remember past favors, and, as he forgets who fixed him after the Weeden-Walker affair and when he was leaving this town in 1876, he had better ask some of his own friends here, and they will tell him if Cleary was all for Cleary then, and that he can never repay what I did for him at that time. I know I am young, but I am growing too old to let him use me as he used to when I was boy enough to think him a good and true man."

ON THE ROAD.—Jim Caywood, who many years ago used to cheer up the sporting blades of the Twentieth and Twenty-second Wards with his plaintive and humorous ballads, has followed the aerial road, and located on the corner of One Hundred and Thirty-first street and Seventh avenue Boulevard. Man and beast can here find fluids and solids served up to the Queen's taste.

JOHNNY LYDON, boxer and club-swinger, has, we are informed, been engaged by Captain Max as a professional swimmer at Rockaway Beach, L. I., where he has been doing duty at the big hotel.

THE TRIGGER.

THE CENTRAL GUN CLUB of Troy, N. Y., had a practice of extra interest June 17. In the first match only the five delegates elected to the State Shoot by the club contested. A. Paul carried off the honors by killing five straight birds. In an open glass-ball match that followed T. Curley broke ten balls—a perfect score—and J. Pickering took second prize, with nine balls to his credit. In the third match A. King broke nine and C. Fluckrose eight balls. The concluding contest was exciting—the nerve and unerring aim of Troy's veteran marksman, Nelson Lewis, winning for him the first prize and great applause. Lewis' score was perfect—ten straight balls; S. Gorgius second.

THE DENVER TROPHIES, offered as company and battalion prizes, were shot for at Frogmoor range, La., June 13, with the following scores: Company shoot—Louisiana Field Artillery, five men, 162; Continental Guards, five men, 170; Washington Artillery, four men, 160. Battalion shoot—Louisiana Field Artillery, eight men, 422; Washington Artillery, seven men, 388; Continental Guards, eight men, 387. In each competition every man fired five rounds at 200yds. and the same number at 500yds.

THE Massachusetts State Glassball Association on June 18 elected the following officers: President, L. G. White; secretary, Frank T. Noble, Malden; vice-presidents, A. N. Parry, W. H. Hoyt, G. Mains, J. H. Wright, E. W. Buffington, J. S. Sawyer, W. B. Rice, W. H. Leighton Jr., E. S. Knowles, A. H. Jones, J. C. Smith, F. H. Lander and O. S. Baldwin; treasurer, A. Keating; directors, E. W. Webster, C. H. Wales, H. H. Francis, D. Kirkwood and H. S. Fay.

THE SCHAGHTICOKE POWDER COMPANY gave a dinner to riflemen at Valley Falls, N. Y., June 13. The visitors shot at the different ranges on the company's grounds, the following being the winners: At 100yds., Bovee of Troy, 34 out of a possible 35. Reynolds, Albany, won at 200yds.; Reynick, Albany, won at 300yds.; Hepburn, Ilion, a perfect score at 500yds.; Clark, Poughkeepsie, at 900yds.; Geiger, Hudson, at 1,000yds.

THE LYNN (MASS.) CENTRAL CLUB on June 18 again won the gold badge in the State glass ball tournament at Oak Island, Mass. There were five men on each team, each contestant firing at fifteen balls, and the score was as follows: Lynn Central Club, 69; Merrymount Club, 57; Raymond Club, 48; Lynn Sportsman's Club, 55; Pow-wow Club, 64; Worcester Club, 61; Malden Club, 60; Fall River Club, 66; Middlesex Club, 51.

E. N. SNOOK won the CRICKET.

GAMES TO BE PLAYED.

June 25, Brooklyn vs. Appleton, at Prospect Park, Brooklyn.

MANHATTAN vs. YOUNG AMERICA.

Prospect Park, Brooklyn, was the scene of an interesting cricket match June 15 between the Manhattans and Young Americas. It was the sixth first-eleven match the Young Americas had played in this season, they having previously defeated the Dorians, Oxfords, Girards, Longwoods and Chestnut Hills. The weather, which had been rainy for the previous week, proved very propitious, and with a capital wicket to play on things were just lovely for a good day's cricketing. It was a one-day's match only, and the contest was wisely confined to one inning's play on each side. The Young Americas presented a good eleven, especially in fielding strength, but the team did not include Large, Bussler, Brewster, Clark or Baird. The Manhattans, however, were out in their full strength, they having Greig and Davy, who were not in the eleven they took to Philadelphia. For this reason the home-team were sanguine of giving the visitors a good fight. The contest began at 11.40, with the Manhattans at the bat, and to their disappointment four of their strong batsmen were retired for a total of 11 runs, of which but 7 were off the bat. Afterwards the two professionals—Smith and Emmett—made a fair stand, adding 17 to the score between them; but the bowling was too much for the Manhattans, and the result was their retirement for a total of 50, of which Dr. Hulbert's was the best score. No fewer than seven of the eleven were caught out, a beauty being made at leg by J. R. Davis, and a pretty one at cover-point by Dixon. Morris made the only 4-hit of the inning. In the bowling Charley Newhall led, with 5 wickets for 17, H. B. Davis getting 4 for 19. In the Young Americas' inning Charley Newhall's lucky escapes were noteworthy, he having two lives given him by Emmett and one by Smith. Young Davis, too, was badly missed by Greig before scoring. H. B. Davis topped the score of the inning with a well-earned 22, marked by a 3 to leg and seven 2's, Robert Newhall being next, with 17, containing three 3's, Dan adding 15, marked by a drive for 4 and a 3 to leg. Charley got off two drives for 3 each after his escapes. The "tail end" made a good stand, Young Davis handling his bat well after his escape, and Van Rensselaer adding a good 9. In the fielding Capt. White did service at mid-wicket, and Morris behind the wicket, Makin doing some pretty long-stop work. The fielding, however, was not up to the mark. Dr. Hulbert marked his fielding by throwing out Charley Newhall neatly. The Manhattans hospitably entertained the visitors, who were delighted with their trip and its result. With the visitors were several veteran cricketers, among them Fortun of the St. George eleven of 1872 and Dr. Ward of Newark.

CRICKET IN PHILADELPHIA.

The numerous games played in the Quaker City June 18 were largely attended, especially the one at Stenton, between the Young America and Merion Clubs. Robert Newhall made 49 out of 55 scored for the fall of the third wicket by exceedingly fine batting, his hitting all round being well-timed, clean and hard. The result was a victory for the Young America by the totals of the first inning.

The first game between the Girards and Chestnut Hills was played on the former's ground. The Girards won, thanks to "Nellie" Pearson's finely-hit contribution of 57. Herrick and Murphy enlivened matters by their excellent batting.

The Columbias defeated the Fairmounts by 113 to 101, and the Lafayettes beat the Continentals 32 to 13, both being one-inning games. The second elevens of the Germantowns and Young Americas met on the former's ground. Warder, Welsh and Worrell of the Germantowns batted in fine form for their respective scores of 66, 29 and 25, and their team totaled 150 in the first inning, while the Young Americas made but 53 and 62 in their two innings, and thus met with a decisive defeat. The second elevens of the Oxford and Girard Clubs had a close and exciting contest, the latter winning by 59 to 57. The second eleven of the Belmonts beat the first eleven of the Keystones, 112 to 69, Morrison batting well for 42.

CRICKET IN ENGLAND.

The match between Lancashire and Derbyshire May 26, 27, resulted in a victory for the former by an inning and 135 runs, the result being mainly due to A. N. Hornby's mammoth contribution of 188, in which he gave only two chances. Yorkshire defeated Middlesex on the same days by one inning and nine runs, Emmett carrying his bat out for 89, while Hill took four of the Middlesex wickets for eight runs. The annual match between the Marylebone Club and the University of Cambridge was played May 22, 23 and 24, and, owing to the large scoring, resulted in a draw. The Studd Brothers batted in grand form for Cambridge, and scored 389 of the 439 runs credited to the University. C. T. Studd successfully defended his wicket against the fine bowling of Shaw, Morley and others, and was not out each inning with 62 and 70, and G. B. Studd contributed 80 and 48, and J. E. Studd 15 and 14. Alfred Shaw made 78, not out, this being the largest score he has ever made in a first-class match, and the Marylebone Club put on 302 runs in the first inning. Yorkshire defeated Cambridge University the week previous by eight wickets, J. K. Studd's 40 and 28 and G. B. Studd's 5 and 68 being the leading contributions to the collegians' total, while Hall, with 77, and Ulyett, 66, were the chief run-getters for Yorkshire.....In the match between the Gentlemen of England and Cambridge University played May, 30, 31 and June 1, 901 runs were scored for the loss of thirty-two wickets. For England, A. P. Lucas contributed 142, and bowled five overs for 3 runs and two wickets. J. E. Studd and C. T. Studd gave very fine displays of batting in their respective scores of 154 and 113 for the University.....Marylebone defeated Yorkshire with eight wickets to spare on May 29, 30; Hill clean bowled five wickets for 18 runs.....Alfred Shaw, Morley, Barnes, Flowers, Selby, Shrewsbury and Scotton have seceded from the Nottinghamshire team, owing to a disagreement with the authorities, and that county was easily defeated by Lancashire with ten wickets to spare on June 2, 3.....On the last-mentioned days Yorkshire defeated Surrey by an inning and 200 runs..... The match between the Gentlemen of England and Oxford University, began at Oxford June 2, presented the novel feature of being begun on one ground and finished on another. The authorities having put a veto on gate-money on the new ground in the parks, an attempt was made to play the match in the Christchurch inclosure; but this was found to be so dangerous that, after A. J. Webbe had had to retire hurt, a move was made to the parks. .....W. G. Grace has in his time done some sensational things in the way of run-getting; but we question if he has ever equaled his performance at Bristol on May 27. The occasion was a match between the St. George and Bedminster Clubs, on the ground of the latter, and as a miracle of run-getting it may be stated that W. G. Grace, while in with Messrs. Day and Cole, helped to get as many as 300 runs in two hours and a half. Mr. Day had to leave to catch a train, after seeing 265 runs made without the loss of a wicket, and Mr. Grace was out just as time was called for 268, his being the only wicket captured for a total of 356.

STATEN ISLAND VS. ST. GEORGE.—The second elevens of these clubs contended at Staten Island June 16, when the Staten Islands won by nine runs, the respective totals being: Staten Island, 58 and 37; St. George, 48 and 38.

METROPOLITAN vs. TROY.

The seventh game this season between the above-named clubs was played June 18 at the Polo Grounds before an assemblage numbering nearly three thousand people. The League nine presented Ewing in Ferguson's place at second base. The Metropolitans, who had blanked the Troys on April 20, came literally within an ace of repeating the dose on the present occasion, when they were credited with their second victory of the series. The crowd was the largest seen on the field since Decoration-day, the Troys not having played before so large a concourse of spectators at any of their home games this season. The Mets put in Neagle to pitch against the visitors, and he did splendid work in the position, alike in pitching and fielding. He was given admirable support in the field, especially by Esterbrook, and the result was a well-earned victory for the home-team, achieved against effective pitching by Keefe and tiptop fielding, in which Caskins and Connor did splendid service in their positions. The only run scored in the game by the Troys was made in the fifth inning on a wild throw by Neagle. The Metropolitans scored an unearned run on singles by Neagle and Esterbrook, and good base-running by the former in the third inning, another in the fifth by a force-hit and Holbert's wild throw, and two runs in the eighth on safe hits by Muldoon and Dorgan and a wild throw by Hankinson. Kennedy opened with a base-hit in the seventh, but a fine double-play by Caskins and Ewing cut off the run. Afterwards Brady made a three-bagger, but was left. In the ninth inning the Mets were prevented from scoring by a pretty double-play by Connor in throwing home to Holbert. Fine double-plays, too, were made by Esterbrook and Muldoon, and Kennedy and Neagle. The contest was full of splendid plays, the errors being few and far between, and mainly excusable. During the game a row was twice caused by one of the Polo Association's employes, who was finally arrested by the police for unprovoked assaults on two of the young spectators. Caskins was caught napping by Brady at an early stage of the contest, and this cost the Troys at least two runs, as Hankinson followed with a single and Keefe with a two-bagger. Say's short-stopping and Brady's batting were features.

TROY vs. BUFFALO.

The fourth game between the Troys and Buffalos was played June 17 at Troy, N. Y., before 700 people. The Troys won by their superior batting, although they were outfielded. The Buffalos did not reach third base during the game. The Troys earned both of their runs on singles by Connor and Cassidy, and two-baggers by Gillespie and Ferguson. Difficult running catches were made by Cassidy and Gillespie, and Force and Peters fielded finely. Caskins captured a high-liner in a manner that elicited great applause.

These clubs met again at Troy, N. Y., June 20, when the Buffalos were strengthened by the reappearance of Jim White. The Troys took the lead in the first inning, when two hits and errors by White and Peters allowed three men to cross the home-plate, and they duplicated this in the sixth and seventh on six safe hits. The Buffalos made but two runs, one being earned by O'Rourke's two-bagger in the sixth. Galvin was batted all over the field, while the Buffalos could do but little with Welch, who pitched admirably throughout.

THE ADVENT of the Quickstep nine at the Polo Grounds on June 17 was not a success. They were easily defeated by the Metropolitans by a score of 14 to 0. They have some good players in Cramer, Wareham, McFarlan and one or two others, but they are not strong enough to cope with the Metropolitans. Doyle of the Rose Hills of St. John's College was given a trial in pitching by the Metropolitans in this game, and he was successful against the unpracticed Quicksteps, being finely supported.

WORCESTER vs. CLEVELAND.

After meeting with three successive defeats at the hands of the Clevelands, the Worcesters won when they met for the fourth time this season, June 17, at Worcester, Mass. The home-team put in Corey to pitch, and tried an amateur named Stratton in the short-stop's position. Corey proved very effective, except in the fourth inning, when three hits were made; Stratton, however, missed an easy chance for a double-play, which would have retired the Clevelands without a run. Hotaling and Stovey did most of the batting for the Worcesters, and scored all but one of their runs. Bushong and Creamer caught two men at the home-plate and two men at second base on the old dodge of the runner on first attempting to sacrifice himself to let the man on third get in.

On the following day the Worcesters blanked the Clevelands, and secured an easy victory. The visitors substituted Nolan and Kennedy for McCormick and Clapp in the positions of pitcher and catcher respectively. Irwin reappeared as short-stop for the Worcesters. Corey's pitching again proved very puzzling to the visitors, while the home-team hit Nolan as freely as they did McCormick. The Worcesters made three runs in the first inning on three hits and a base on balls, assisted by two wild pitches and a passed ball. In the second the home-team made another run on Nolan's fumble and Stovey's two-bagger, and they earned the last run after two men were out in the eighth on Carpenter's single and Corey's two-baser. Only one of the Clevelands reached third base.

BOSTON vs. CHICAGO.

The Chicagos received their first defeat of the season at the hands of the Bostons June 17 in Boston, Mass., in the presence of nearly seven thousand people. The Bostons, who were strengthened by the reappearance of Snyder and Burdock, commenced run-getting in the first inning, when Whitney and Fox hit safely and the former scored on Goldsmith's wild throw. In the second, Crowley got his base on called balls, and then four successive singles gave the home-team two more runs. The Chicagos made one in the fifth off Burns' two-bagger and Barnes' failure to accept a difficult catch, and added two more in the sixth on singles by Gore and Kelly and the outs of the next two men. Burdock's two-baser and Williamson's error gave the lead again to the Bostons in the sixth, and they still further increased it in the following inning on singles by Snyder, Sutton and Fox, and a base on called balls. This ended the run-getting. Score:

These clubs met again on the same ground the next day, when nearly two thousand persons were present. The home-team again outbatted and outfielded their opponents, but were defeated through their failure to get in a safe hit when most needed. After two men were out in the first inning, Fox and Burdock hit safely, and, aided by a passed ball, the former scored the only run credited to the Bostons. The Chicagos tied the score in the fifth, when Corcoran got his base on called balls, and came home on Quest's two-baser. In the sixth, successive safe hits by Dalrymple, Gore, Anson, Williamson and Burns gave the Chicagos three earned runs, and they added one more on Corcoran's two-bagger, a wild pitch and Quest's single in the ninth.

INGERSOLLISM.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY BOBBY NEWCOMB.

A grand and solemn silence,
A mystic hush—a dearth
That falls like pall of darkness
Around this noisy earth:
A brilliant light extinguished,
The glare of grandeur gone—
Silence, deathlike silence,
In graveyards grimly born!

Silence! 'Tis a heaven,
Oblivion's obvious shore.
Silence, lasting silence,
'Tis peace forevermore!
No trumpet-sound shall mar it,
The earth shall have its own:
Silence, glorious silence,
That's moulded in the stone!

THE BRAND OF CAIN.

CHAPTER II.

Upon the day after this singular scene a mournful assemblage congregated at the chateau in the Valley of Chevreuse. A sympathetic concourse waited on the extensive lawn of the grand courtyard. The entire village had desired to accompany to their last resting-place the remains of the excellent man who for ten years had spread benefits broadcast. Not a poor cotter of the canton failed to appear at this rendezvous of gratitude.

De Mathis, before dying, had expressed a desire to repose in the humble cemetery of the hamlet, beneath the shadow of the old church reconstructed at his expense in the midst of cottages indebted to him for a modest ease. The worthy villagers accepted this choice as a final pledge in their interest, and among those prepared to participate in his funeral not one could be found indifferent to his loss.

Three coffins, ranged side by side beneath the grand entrance, stood prominent, draped in black, against the chateau's white front. The master had requested that the same cortege should accompany in common victims to a common accident. A distant female relative and an old family servant, who had died with him, were to be borne with him to the cemetery. The poor cousin annually finding a cordial welcome to the chateau, and the faithful domestic consecrating a life to the service of the Mathis family, reposed upon biers similar to that whereon rested the rich ghatelain by them beloved. It was the touching equality of death.

The poison had broadly spread its work. Out of five persons stricken, but one was still alive. Mme. De Mathis, after suffering unexampled pains, appeared to be beyond danger. Nevertheless, to violent convulsions had succeeded an invincible torpor. She could neither move nor speak, and Mademoiselle Andree, never quitting the invalid's bedside, despaired of her reason. It might be said that the terrible poison had desired to exemplify the measure of its illimitable potency through sparing the body to annihilate the mind. Otherwise it had remained pitiless, and the unfortunate young lady, miraculously escaping poison personally, bore her heavy share in the calamity. Her adopted father was dead, her protectress lived only to suffer, and her betrothed had died. This crushing intelligence had been received at the chateau upon the previous evening. Monsieur Gontran De Kergas, after having parted from Jules Noridet, had been stricken upon entering his house. His robust constitution struggled resolutely; but the effects of the poison reproduced themselves in a peculiar form. Profound lethargies alternated during twenty-four hours with agonizing crises, until a final prostration gradually assumed supreme sway, and Andree's betrothed, the brilliant naval officer, braving death in every clime, passed into his last slumber in an ordinary chamber of a hotel.

There was a commotion amid the assembled crowd. The hour for departure had struck, and the sad procession was being formed. De Mathis' farmers had declined to surrender the honor of bearing their employer's corpse, and the three coffins, carried by pious arms, were followed by a long column of sorrow-stricken mourners. Jules Noridet headed the grieving train. Pale, with sunken cheeks, reddened eyes, surrounded by a bluish circle, the mourner had grown ten years older within two days, and appeared scarcely capable of self-sustenance. He walked with a trembling step, bent beneath the burden of a sorrow whose sincerity none even dreamed of suspecting.

"He is more to be commiserated than the dead," whispered the sympathizing farmers.

It had never entered their minds to recognize as the heir that handsome Parisian whom they had only seen at the chateau to open the shooting season, and they firmly believed that De Mathis' millions would pass to his widow for the benefit of the Chevreuse Valley.

Behind the grief-smitten nephew came distant relatives, country neighbors and the Versailles doctor—a fine, white-haired gentleman, formerly friend, as well as medical attendant, at the chateau. This small group of mourners alone testified that the deceased had been among the happy in this world, and upon a Parisian boulevard the humble cortege accompanying his remains would have scarce attracted the curiosity of a busy mob. In the midst of rural surroundings the spectacle was profoundly touching. The procession moved towards the village through a narrow avenue piercing a wood whose foliage, already withered at Autumn's touch, appeared draped in mourning. A magnificent September morning gilded the white trunks of the beech-tree, while birds sang from their uppermost branches. This contrast between ever-living nature and quickly-dying man struck even the countrymen's unpoetic souls. Tears stood in the eyes of all.

They were entering the cemetery, when a tall man, scrupulously clad in black, silently joined the procession. His arrival was only noticed by the venerable physician, who received the stranger with a nod of the head, and made room at his side for him.

The final moment arrived. The spectators arranged themselves respectfully around the priests, reciting prayers for the dead, and the cords creaked beneath the weight of the coffins with a doleful sound, seemingly from a world beyond.

Jules Noridet stood alone, erect, with clasped hands, at the head of his uncle's grave. His eyes wandered vaguely upon the crowd, as if flying from the sight of the funeral biers; but gradually they lowered, and Jules leaned over the consecrated ground, which apparently fascinated his vision. It might be said that the dead was calling him. The doctor, touched by pity, advanced and sustained him, while the curate of the hamlet delivered some parting remarks. He spoke gravely and simply. He praised the virtues of the deceased and his benevolence, and terminated by reminding his auditors that a good man does not wholly die.

"The death of the just," said the priest in moving tones, "is but the aurora of a new life, eternal and ever happy, awaiting them on high."

The stranger had approached nearer and nearer to the doctor. He appeared to listen with concentrated attention, and under the influence of a deep impression he repeated, in a low, yet ringing voice, the curate's last words.

"Yes," he murmured with singular accentuation, "death is the aurora—mors AURORA."

Then occurred a remarkable scene. Jules Noridet, supported within the doctor's arms, drew himself upright, as if subjected to an electric shock, his hair standing erect upon his head, while he turned around, scattering wild glances upon every side.

"He! still he!" exclaimed the wretched man, concealing his face within his hands, and then falling stiff by the edge of the grave.

A name—the name of the poisoning negress, pronounced by a mysterious man, whom he recognized—had struck the guilty being as with a thunderbolt. Chastisement was commencing.

Immediately transported to the curate's house, Jules Noridet was not long in recovering consciousness; yet, he remained motionless and speechless. The shock had stunned him.

Within the little garden of the rectory the stranger walked with the venerable priest, who was upbraiding himself as the involuntary cause of the accident.

"I should have considered the sensitiveness of the young man," he said; "and, although it would cost me dear not to have bade, in the name of my parishioners, a farewell to him we all so deeply lament, I would have abstained from speaking could I have foreseen ——"

"At his age impressions are most vivid," interposed the stranger, "and the grief of Monsieur De Mathis' nephew appears to be very deep and very sincere."

"Would you, sir," quoth the priest, with a smile replete with benevolence, "imagine that I had forgotten that Jules has not undergone sufficient worldly trials to seek consolation under this heavy sorrow through turning his thoughts to God? However, I trust that the accident will entail no ill consequences; and here comes Monsieur Brias to reassure us."

"How is your patient, doctor?" inquired the stranger of the physician as he entered the garden.

"Much better, sir; and I think that this evening he will be able to return to Paris. It is a nervous syncope, which is but natural in the youth's case, as day before yesterday he was threatened with death."

"I have been told, in fact, that he likewise had been affected by the poison, and I admire his courage in having headed the funeral," said the stranger gravely.

"Monsieur Noridet adored his uncle, who likewise doted upon him, despite his youthful follies," resumed the doctor, self-opinionated. "Since I have the opportunity of meeting you here, sir, permit me to thank you for the assistance rendered me upon the day of the calamity. It was by virtue of your prescriptions that we saved Madame De Mathis, and I am rejoiced that chance has re-established my relations with so learned a colleague."

"Excuse me," said the stranger, with a smile, "I have not the honor of belonging to the medical profession."

"What! Do you not belong to the faculty at Paris?" exclaimed the doctor.

"Alas! to my sincere regret, no; and if I have been enabled to be of assistance, I owe that satisfaction to extensive traveling. I have inhabited India, and have often had opportunities to witness the effects of vegetable poisons. From an old Asiatic habit, I always carry with me remedies little known in Europe. I had visited Chevreuse to hire a country residence, and upon gleaning information as to the accident had hastened to the chateau. This was natural, and my only regret consists in my non-arrival in time to also save Monsieur De Mathis."

"Truly, sir, you would do honor to our schools," quoth Monsieur Brias, slightly sobered down at the idea of having consulted with a profane; "for I can certify to the surprising effects of the potion prepared by you; and did I dare to ask ——"

"For my receipt? Willingly, doctor; and it will even afford me pleasure to send to you at Versailles a complete set of my antidotes. In the meanwhile, may I know your opinion as to Madame De Mathis' condition?"

"She will live," said the doctor, shaking his head, "but, I fear, as an incurable paralytic."

"What a terrible misfortune!" said the stranger. "And how I commiserate this young gentleman, Monsieur Noridet, I believe—it strikes me thus hearing his name in society where he passes as very rich and very agreeable."

"Hum!" said the curate. "Paris is a very dangerous city. I fear the youth in compromising his salvation has in a measure wrecked his fortune. Still, his uncle has thought of him."

"Certainly," rejoined the doctor; "for I know that Monsieur Mornac, De Mathis' oldest friend, is the depository of his will, and he has often told me that no one has been forgotten. He has gone upon a journey to Switzerland, but the sad intelligence will recall him soon. I desire his return exceedingly on account of Mademoiselle Andree, whose situation is frightful."

"The young lady nursing Madame De Mathis with such devotion?" inquired the stranger, with an appearance of keen solicitude.

"She is an angel of pity and of kindness," remarked the curate, "blessed by all my poor."

"And alone in the world!" added Monsieur Brias, with a sigh.

The features of the unknown had assumed a strange expression, and he perceptibly sought to master a violent emotion.

"Pray God for Mademoiselle Andree, curate," said he in a ringing voice, "and I am certain that God will watch over her."

And, gravely saluting his two companions, he quitted the garden, mounted into a coupe awaiting him on the roadway, and rapidly disappeared.

"What a singular person!" ejaculated Monsieur Brias, "to depart thus without leaving me his address! I begin to think that he is a lunatic."

"In any case he is a benevolent lunatic, for he handed me a thousand-franc bill for my poor, and has saved the good lady of the chateau."

"Bah!" replied the doctor, who did not lack conceit. "It may be luck, after all. I have no great confidence in these foreign healers, and I'll wager that he will never send me his wonderful recipe. Come, let's see how comes on our patient—that is more serious."

He moved towards the rectory, when Jules Noridet appeared, leaning upon the arm of the curate's aged female servant. He was livid, and his disordered features yet bore traces of the emotion that had overpowered him upon the edge of the grave. By a singular contrast his eyes glowed with an extraordinary brilliancy, and seemed to be in search of someone.

"Well, my dear friend, here you are afoot again," said the doctor gayly. "Let's feel your pulse. Good—the fever has diminished. Now, since you are in a condition for departure, mount into my vehicle and return to Versailles with me without passing the chateau. Your poor aunt has no need of you, and you have had trials enough for to-day. You can take the 7.30 train and sleep to-night in Paris, where I shall be to-morrow to see you. This is my sole prescription, but I intend it shall be punctually taken."

The sick man replied not, yet it could be divined that a question hung upon his lips.

"You have been conversing with someone?" he finally said, with an effort.

"Yes; a stranger—an original, fallen from the clouds, or rather from the Indies."

"Ah! my dear doctor," said the good curate, with a slight tone of reproach, "I shall never forget that but for him there would have been another coffin to bless."

"He has attended your aunt," said Monsieur Brias to Noridet, "and I will not deny that his remedy has proved useful; still, that does not prevent him from being a most eccentric gentleman."

"And—and—what has become of him?" inquired Jules, with a tremor in his voice.

"He vanished like the Devil in person—your pardon, dear curate—like a will o' the wisp," added the doctor apologetically, as he substituted a more appropriate comparison.

"He abruptly ascended into his carriage, and has returned to Paris," interposed the kind priest in response to the inquisitive glances of Jules.

"Without telling his name?" asked the latter in anxiety.

"Without telling his name; and, in truth, I was remarkably stupid in not asking it," resumed Monsieur Brias. "But the caleche awaits us, and it is time to start. Come, dear friend," he added, taking his patient's arm; and Jules suffered himself to be carried to Versailles, where he underwent treatment at the doctor's hands during the afternoon.

At night, at a quarter past eight, Jules Noridet arrived in Paris, descending at the Montparnasse depot. At the moment of the down train's stoppage, the cars forming the train for Brest were being attached on the other side of the track—an operation watched by Noridet with the feelings of a worn-out man in search of distraction. His eyes mechanically fixed themselves upon a green coupe being hoisted upon a platform. The depot lanterns brilliantly lighted up the interior of this vehicle, and Noridet perceived that it was occupied by two gentlemen in mourning. He was looking with more attention, when a slight noise caused him to turn his head. He was alone in his copartment, but someone placing himself upon the external carriage step lowered the window-glass, and a voice that he too well recognized uttered this ironical sentence:

"Salute, Monsieur Jules, the vehicle conveying into Brittany the corpse of your friend Gontran De Kergas!"

Noridet bounded to the door. But he saw nothing. The travelers crowded the depot-platform, and the terrible unknown was lost amid the multitude. After a moment's hesitation, Noridet hurried in search of him. He had determined to solve the mystery, and while elbowing the concourse to make room he muttered between his teeth:

"This evening I will know who is that man."

During the journey from Chevreuse to Paris, Jules Noridet had time for reflection and to resume his habitual calmness. His mind was none of those submitting to uncertainty, and he desired at all hazards to shake off that despondency in which successive shocks had plunged him. Had he temporarily submitted to Monsieur Lugos' domination, it was with the mental reservation of severing the bond as soon as possible, even through the commission of a fresh crime. But, to struggle with this dangerous adversary, it was all-important that Jules should possess a perfect knowledge of the man with whom he had to deal. The opportunity was favorable, and he resolved to profit by it.

The slightest advantage accruing from an immediate pursuit would be to ascertain the domicile, and possibly the real name, of Monsieur Lugos. The main object was not to lose his track.

The day had been magnificent, and the excursionists returning from Versailles formed a compact mass; but Noridet had calculated that the stream would be compelled to slacken pace upon arriving at the ticket-taker's gate. He pushed to the front, and, instead of scrutinizing the crowd haphazard, he fixed his eye upon the point of egress at which the travelers presented themselves in single file. It was the most certain method for passing them in review, and his calculation verified his conclusions. At ten paces before him he saw the stranger quietly deliver his ticket to the gatekeeper, and pass out without turning around. The chase forthwith commenced, and the pursuer manœuvred with as much prudence as dexterity. Within five seconds he had crossed the gateway and noticed his man descending the long staircase of the left river-side platform, singularly placed at the height of a third story.

"He supposes his second apparition to have produced a similar effect to the first," muttered Noridet, "and believes me to have fainted upon the carriage cushions. "Once is sufficient, Monsieur Lugos," he added, clenching his fists. "Now there is work for two."

And as a means of precaution he pulled up the collar of his overcoat and leisurely commenced the descent, preserving his distance from the stranger. It was probable that the unknown would take a carriage, and Noridet trembled in fear of seeing him ascend into a well-equipped vehicle, difficult to follow by a hack. This fear was not realized. Monsieur Lugos stopped for an instant under the peristyle to light a cigar, and this slight halt afforded his adversary time to study details in his costume and manner. Then he made his way towards the Boulevard Montparnasse with the easy step of a man of leisure, and turned into the Rue de Rennes, taking the right-hand sidewalk. Noridet followed on the opposite side, taking care to drop towards the rear, and thus to remain beyond the reach of an oblique glance. Moreover, the street had been invaded by the passengers from Versailles, and there was slight danger of being perceived. Upon reaching the square at the corner of the Rue Vangirard, the stranger appeared to reflect for an instant; yet he did not turn back, but continued to the left. Noridet, dwelling in the Rue de Helder, and dividing his existence between the Boulevards and the Bois de Boulogne, was comparatively unacquainted with the quarter wherein he found himself. This was a marked disadvantage, for the unknown could turn a sharp corner and disappear into some unperceived alley, while this ignorance of the land compelled the pursuer to lessen the intervening distance, so as not to be suddenly at fault. Monsieur Lugos followed the Rue Saint Placide as far as the Rue de Sevres, and took the direction towards the Boulevard des Invalides. In taking this route he almost retraced his steps, and Noridet for the moment entertained a suspicion that the unknown was endeavoring to throw him off the scent. His uneasiness was not, however, of long duration; for, a few paces beyond, the stranger turned the corner of the Rue Vanneau, and quietly entered the alleyway of the first house to the left. Noridet experienced a sensation of delight—the first for three days. His plan had succeeded. The enemy was traced to a definite locality, into which it was only necessary to penetrate after him. The undertaking was not without difficulties.

In the first place, it might chance that Monsieur Lugos had simply entered to converse with a friend, and, in fact, it was more than probable that he did not inhabit a domicile of this nature. The house was old and black, the walls bulged out in a threatening manner, and at the bottom of the open alley through which he had disappeared could be distinctly distinguished empty barrels, boards piled about and masses of ironware. It was clear that this rookery could only be occupied by poor artisans, and, moreover, the various trades plied by them by no means favored preservation of any secrecy. They entered the place as a common market, and emerged in the same manner. The supervision of a janitor appeared superfluous for the security of so wretched a dwelling. Noridet was not, therefore, compelled to resort to the conventional expedient of crossing the palms of reticent porters with golden coin for the purpose of unloosening their tongues; but suddenly an idea struck him as its substitute. Drawing out his pocketbook, and removing visiting-cards and papers bearing his name, he suffered to remain a couple of hundred-franc bankbills, with which in his hand he boldly advanced down the muddy alley. A bright light illuminated the end of the passage, and there could be heard repeated blows of a hammer upon an anvil. Guided by the light and noise, Noridet reached a dilapidated workship, wherein a man was forging an axletree.

"Hullo, my fine fellow!" he exclaimed, "can I have a couple of words with you?"

The workman turned towards the visitor a blackened face whence beamed very keen eyes and gleamed pearl-white teeth.

"A dozen, if you please," said he in a rough voice.

"Here, then," resumed Noridet. "I was just now coming along the Rue de Sevres behind a gentleman who came in here, when, on the sidewalk, I found this pocketbook, dropped by him. You must have seen him pass, and if you tell me his name and on what story he lives I will go up and return it to him. There are bankbills in it."

As the blacksmith did not hurry to reply, Noridet jumped at the conclusion that he would not be sorry to profit by a godsend; so he hastened to add:

"If there's a reward, we'll divide."

"In faith, it will be of no use," said the artisan, "for the job would never pay, as I can't give information when I haven't seen anybody. Remember, I tap on the anvil, and do not often turn round."

"The Devil! that is embarrassing," said Noridet, with a well-played air of disappointment. "Nevertheless, I can ring at all the bells."

"Oh, not worth the trouble, see you. Gentlemen carrying bankbills in their pocket don't lodge in this house. The money-king owning them has come here to leave an order, and he'll come down, sure. So, if you want to return the papers, you have only to wait for him here."

"That's a good idea," rejoined Noridet; "and as I don't want to derange you, I'll step into the street and smoke a cigar. After all, it may be best to carry the thing to the Commissary-of-police, if I don't happen to fall in with my man."

"You can't miss him—the house only has one door," said the smith, cutting off further conversation by a ringing blow from his massive hammer.

Noridet left tolerably well satisfied with the result of this initial inquiry. It seemed, in fact, probable that Monsieur Lugos would shortly emerge, and the surest way was to await him on the outside. It was only necessary to observe without being seen. The street was extremely narrow, and a gaslight illuminated it vividly; consequently a prolonged halt in it would not fail to attract attention. But the watcher soon discovered the post he coveted. Opposite the house extended the glazed front of a shop that might pass equally for a coffee-house and a low-priced restaurant. Noridet inspected the window, behind which figured, at the bottom of a salad bowl, prunes stewed in a doubtful mixture. The curtains were half upraised, and he espied a table at liberty, whence a view through the glass could be obtained. He entered, took possession of his observatory, and, to secure at once the consideration of the saloon-keeper and the privilege of a protracted sojourn, ordered a bowl of punch. As the preparation of this luxurious beverage should take considerable time, and Monsieur Lugos might at any moment appear in the street, Noridet held himself in readiness to throw a piece of coin upon the table and emerge without tasting his punch, at the risk of being set down as a lunatic. This precaution proved useless.

He had full time to swallow by diminutive driblets the villainous compound he dared not disdain, through fear of attracting too much attention. Two hours in this manner elapsed. The coffee-house gradually emptied itself and the stranger did not show himself. Soon there remained but four old men, of shabby appearance, engaged in finishing an interminable game of dominoes—not, however, without a whispering exchange of remarks upon the singular customer, whose eyes did not leave the street. Noridet commenced feeling decidedly ill at ease. He imagined that these petty tradesmen would suspect him of being a police detective, and even noticed the coffee-house mistress watching him upon the sly. The place was no longer tenable. He paid his score and arose to go out, when he observed Monsieur Lugos coming from the alley to the sidewalk. Although his heart beat with sudden emotion, yet he had strength to master it, and, leisurely gaining the door in order to allow the stranger opportunity to take the lead, he opened it with precaution and stepped into the street. The game he had been on the point of abandoning presented itself under the most favorable advantages. He saw Monsieur Lugos turn the corner of the Rue de Sevres, walk rapidly towards a long line of hacks spread along the sidewalk, pass along the entire file, and ascend into the one at the head of the station. To leap into the last hack of the string was for Noridet but an affair of an instant.

"Follow your comrade taking fare from below there," he whispered curtly to the driver. "Twenty francs if you don't lose sight of him without approaching too near."

"Understood, my master," replied the man in the red waistcoat, clambering upon the box.

Monsieur Lugos doubtless gave complicated directions to his coachman, as the start was delayed. The vehicle was finally set in motion, and that of Noridet urged after it. They took the Rue du Bac, the Pont Royal, and the Carrousel, to defile subsequently into the interminable Rue de Richelieu. Through following this direction, Monsieur Lugos would very probably reach his veritable domicile. They turned by the Boulevard des Italiens.

"I am quite certain," meditated Noridet, enchanted at this change in route, "that he dwells in the Quarter of the Madelaine."

Suddenly he gave evidence of surprise. The pursued hack entered into the Rue du Helder, and a moment afterwards drew up to the sidewalk in front of the house wherein he, Noridet, himself dwelt. What fresh danger was foreshadowed in this visit of the stranger? The disconcerted pursuer scarcely dare ask of himself the question. Oddly enough, Monsieur Lugos did not make an appearance, while the coachman, relinquishing his box-seat, commenced supplying oats to his horses, as if preparing for a long halt. Nevertheless, no one emerged from the vehicle. Noridet could no longer restrain himself. Discarding all prudence, he leaped to the ground and cast a glance over the interior of the vehicle. The hack was empty. Noridet suppressed an exclamation of surprise that was on the point of escaping him, and immediately bethought himself of gleaning information from the driver, who was pacing the sidewalk, pipe in mouth. He quickly invented an excuse for opening conversation.

"Has my friend got out on the way?" he inquired in an off-hand manner.

"Your friend?" repeated the hackman in astonishment. "Yes, the gentleman taking you at the Rue de Sevres. We agreed to meet here, and I do not find him."

"Ah! my customer of a while since. Very sure he did not get out, for he never got in."

"How! he did not get in?"

"No. He paid me at the stand for an hour in advance, and told me to wait for him in the Rue du Helder until half-past twelve. Guess my horses took his eye, and he wants to travel with me."

Noridet commenced discerning the truth.

"Good, good!" quoth he, affecting to be posted; "he must have paid a visit to the Faubourg Saint Germain and delayed his appointment."

"That might be, for he went on foot towards the Croix Rouge, and seemed to be in a hurry."

"Then I decide to await him. Thanks, driver."

"Not at all, master; still, if your friend don't come in half an hour, remember that I have two good beasts to carry you in fine style."

"I don't deny it; I'll take a turn upon the Boulevard and return," said Noridet, carelessly advancing towards his own hack, a few paces distant.

He had succeeded in dissimulating his anger, but he experienced an actual qualm of wrath. Monsieur Lugos had duped him, and he could not deny that the pursuit, so skillfully inaugurated, had terminated in a ridiculous deception. While slowly threading his way on foot towards the Boulevard, Noridet mentally reviewed the incidents of the day, and clearly perceived their actual termination. The stranger had noticed his being followed, and the manœuvre of the Rue de Sevres was a premeditated bit of strategy. Instead of ascending into his hack, Monsieur Lugos had tranquilly pursued his way afoot, leaving his enemy to chase an empty carriage. The selection of the address given to the driver afforded a clue to the mysterious person's ironical intentions. Noridet could not console himself for having fallen into this simple trap, and, furthermore, began reflecting upon the inevitable consequence of his balked enterprise. Should the redoubtable unknown have been cognizant of the fact of his having been watched, his revenge might be both prompt and terrible, and Jules shuddered at this one idea; for, despite his pride, he was forced to acknowledge dealing with a superior being.

THERE was on exhibition at the Sydney International Exhibition a house entirely made of paper. There is very little money in "a paper house," as any theatrical manager will tell you.

ONE of our neighbors had just put on his pants the other morning, when he immediately took them off again, under the impression that they were haunted. The kitten was pulled out by the tail and drowned.

Some troubles is tough to encounter,
And many is hard to pull through;
But there's many, again, don't amounter
One-half what you fancy they do.
And most o' times, gen'ly allers,
A worriment's easy to stand,
And success for the worried man follers
When he keeps his head well in his hand.
If trade has got slack, and you're busted;
If the corn and the wheat crops give out;
If the wife of your buzzum has dusted,
While you are laid up with the gout;
Take your troubles square elbow and collar
(Never mind the mean trick of your wife;
It'll turn out—I'll bet my last dollar—
The luckiest event of your life).

There was war once twixt brother and brother—
Beriah and Absalom Root—
Who had trouble of one kind or 'nother
'Bout a schooner they owned in Cahoot.
The trouble it climaxed one season
That promised a great run o' cod;
And the brothers stood tie, for the reason
They was like as two peas in a pod.
Due east'ard Beriah was bearin',
When Absalom thought it was best
(And he said it with some little swearin')
To pint about norwest-by-west.
'Twarn't no use to waste words on Beriah,
So, due east'ard the schooner she flew;
And Absalom, burnin' with ire,
Sot mids hips and thunk what to do.
He thunk by the rale Yankee standard,
Then forrud he went for a while,
Then aft to Beriah meandered,
And thuswise he spoke with a smile:

"Beriah, I've ceased for to hanker
For word-fights that aint worth a darn;
My part of the schooner's to anchor—
You can do what you please with the starn."
That settled it. Now pay attention—
The boys has growed rich in Cahoot;
And Marblehead's proud to make mention
Of Beri and Absalom Root.

CHAPTER IX.

BY ICARION'S TOMB.

About four months after the events we have just narrated, an old man, tenderly assisted by a stout little woman, might have been seen making his way through one of the numerous streets leading to the great Parisian Circus.

They were tired and travel-stained, and by the texture of their clothes were not blessed with any very great share of worldly goods.

"Cheer up, old fellow!" the old lady was saying; "we shall soon press our dear boy in our arms. He will take care of you for the rest of your life."

"I fear that that will not be very long," sighed the old man.

"We must hope for the best. A few yards further. You look a great deal better to-day." But as she said so, unperceived by the old man, a hot tear coursed down her cheeks.

They had now reached the stable-door of the circus, and with a hopeful face the old lady, in whom our readers have doubtless recognized Mme. Amaryllis, eagerly asked if Icarion the gymnast was within.

"Icarion!" cried the groom, starting with surprise. "Why, have you not heard?"

"Heard what?"

"Excuse me, are you any relation of his?"

"Yes! yes!" cried Mons. Amaryllis impatiently; "I am his father, and ——"

"Then," stammered the man, "you must prepare ——"

"For what! Good God help me! Speak! speak! Do you hear, man?" cried the old manager, grasping the groom's arm with terrible energy.

"He is dead!" replied the man sorrowfully; "but you ——"

"Dead!" cried the poor old people in one voice—"dead!" and Mons. Amaryllis sank fainting to the ground.

"You had better see his wife," said the groom, hurriedly calling for assistance.

"His wife!" cried Mme. Amaryllis. "He has no wife."

"Yes, he has, madame. He was married to Mlle. Viola the very same night that he was killed."

With the assistance of the circus people, Mons. Amaryllis was soon conveyed into a comfortable dressing-room, and a doctor sent for in haste. But the sturdy old fellow was not dead. For a whole hour he remained plunged in a state of insensibility, but at last gradually recovered his senses and strength.

When he was sufficiently recovered to be able to bear it the ringmaster gave the two old people an account of the tragic manner in which Icarion met his death. Mons. and Mme. Amaryllis listened in silence, and then quietly asked to be taken to their son's grave. Several of the circus people immediately volunteered to accompany them, and while on their way to the cemetery of Pere-le-Chaise they told the old people of Viola's devotion—how after her husband's death she had been almost mad with grief; but that she gradually calmed down into a state of woe and sorrow that was pitiful to behold. With her little savings she had erected a monument over his grave, and spent the best part of the day in praying near the tomb that contained the remains of all she could ever love on earth. They also told her how her little horse Puck had been poisoned by the same hand that had caused the death of Icarion.

"It is all my fault!—all my fault!" murmured the old man, "but he was such a splendid clown."

At last they reached the famous Parisian cemetery, and when nearing the grave of the son saw that a woman dressed in deep mourning was kneeling by the tomb-stone. Upon the approach of the bereaved parents she started to her feet, but when she recognized the circus-manager and his wife said quietly:

"I have been expecting you."

Together the three devoted beings knelt by the tomb of the murdered gymnast, and, mingling their tears together, offered up fervent prayers for the repose of his soul.

* * * * * * *

In a very little house situated in the neighborhood of the cemetery of Pere-la-Chaise dwell three people—an old man and his wife and a beautiful young widow.

The younger of the two women works hard all day to provide bread for the old couple, and every evening they may be seen directing their steps towards a certain part of the cemetery, and kneeling at the tomb of the clown Icarion.

Viola will never go inside a circus again. They are happy and contented, though poverty has laid a stern grasp upon them. They live but with one thought in their minds and one word upon their lips:

"Icarion."

CHAPTER X.

RETRIBUTION.

Once more we are in the neighborhood of Toulouse. It is a dark and stormy night; the rain pours down in torrents, and the wind whistles shrilly as it rushes past the train from Lyons. In a first-class carriage are seated a middle-aged gentleman and a young lady evidently his wife. By the affectionate glances they exchange and their proximity to each other, it is easy to see that they are a newly-married couple. In a third-class carriage in another part of the same train are four men; two of them are evidently prisoners, the other two evidently form their escort. They all four seem to be tired out with a long railway journey; the prisoners appear to be asleep; the two men forming their escort evidently are asleep.

"What a terrible night!" murmured the lady seated in the first-class carriage to her companion.

"Yes," is his reply; "but we shall soon be safe in our own homes, dear Arabelle. I was getting quite tired of traveling."

"So was I. I long for a period of rest."

"But I hope that you have enjoyed yourself since we started on our honeymoon."

"Of course I have. It has been a great relief to me. I was very, very glad to get away from Villaudric."

"Were you not happy in your old home?"

"No. But don't ask me why, for I shall never tell you. I—I—hardly know myself. I suppose the place was lonely."

"There was no chance of falling in love," laughed Mons. Gineres.

"No. No chance of—falling in love," replied Arabelle in a strange voice. "How shall I ever be able to thank you for your—your kindness and love?"

"You have nothing to thank me for, dear Arabelle."

"Yes, I have. Have you not bestowed wealth and station upon me, the penniless daughter of Villaudric?"

"You gave me more than I can ever repay you when your hand was placed in mine. I value your love more than I value all the gold in the world. I never expected you to love a man so much older than myself. I only expect you to keep the name of Gineres untarnished by any further stain."

"You have never told me the history of that wicked brother of yours," said Arabelle thoughtfully.

"It is soon told, darling. My younger brother Gaston and myself were left an equal share of our father's wealth; but while I invested mine in business and finally started the bank, he spent his in dissipation, ruined himself, and finally became a forger. He was sentenced, in default, to five years' imprisonment, but has managed to escape the clutches of the law up to this moment."

"Have you never heard of him since?"

"Never. And I never want to. I can forgive anything but dishonor."

A shudder ran through Arabelle's frame at the mention of the last word, and the image of a certain grinning face flashed across her mind.

Was she to be pursued with that terrible phantom all her life?

Oh, how she had suffered when the news of the finding of Sebastien's body reached her, and the bloody letter that had saved her reputation was placed in her hand.

"Poor Sebastien," she murmured to herself, "upon your tomb I swore to be a good and faithful wife to this man. God help me to keep my vow; and may that other—serpent never cross my path again."

Suddenly the locomotive began to "slow up," while a series of piercing whistles issued from its brazen throat.

"Are we already at Toulouse?" asked Arabelle in astonishment.

"No," replied Mons. Gineres, peering out of the window. "I think that the heavy rain must have damaged the track, or we may be near some crossing; but ——"

Suddenly the sharp report of a pistol was heard, followed by a second, then a third and fourth, while the train came to a stand-still a few seconds later.

"What can be the matter?" asked Arabelle in alarm. "Do get out and see. I will come with you. I can't stay in this carriage."

The rain had now almost ceased; and, impetuous as ever, Arabelle sprang from the carriage, followed by her husband. They directed their steps towards a group of men who were bending over two dark forms extended upon the ground. A lantern held by the conductor cast a feeble glare of light upon the scene.

"What is the matter?" asked Mons. Gineres.

"Two convicts attempted to escape just as we slowed up," replied the conductor; "but I m thinking that these two gentlemen" (pointing to Captain Gaillonnet and his assistant) "have settled their little account forever."

"Poor fellows," murmured Arabelle and Mons. Gineres in the same breath.

"My God!" suddenly exclaimed Mons. Gineres, bending over one of the prostrate forms; "Gaston, as sure as I'm alive. Poor Gaston!"

"What is it?" asked Arabelle anxiously, glancing from one body to the other.

Just at that moment the rays from the conductor's lantern fell upon the face of the second body.

"Papiol!" murmured Arabelle to herself, and sank fainting to the ground.

"Gaston Gineres the forger, and Aladin the clown-murderer," said Captain Gaillonnet, calmly drawing up a report of the affair.

A few minutes later the train was again in motion, the first-class carriage containing Mons. Gineres and his wife, and the third-class carriage two motionless and bleeding bodies.

Arabelle explained her agitation by saying that the sight of the blood had made her feel faint; and while Mons. Gineres tried his best to calm her he murmured:

"And now, darling, we have no secrets from each other, and the only cloud is removed from the horizon of our happiness."

"It is," replied Arabelle solemnly.

Papiol's hidden gold was hunted for by hundreds of people, but up to this day has never been found.

Mons. Repluma, Cavagnol and Don Taddheus are still looking for "orphans," but rarely find them; and all three have grown gray while seeking for what they will never find—money without work.

THE END.

PROCLAMATION OF CHARLES II

IN REGARD TO THEATRES.

Charles R.—Whereas complaint hath often been made unto Us, that divers persons do rudely press, and with evil Language and Blows force their way into Our Theatres (called the Theatre Royal in Bridge street and the Duke's Theatre in Dorset Garden) at the time of their Publick Representations and Actings, without paying the Price established at both the said Theatres, to the great disturbance of Our Servants, Licensed by Our Authority, as well as others, and to the danger of the Publick Peace; Our Will and Pleasure therefore is, and We do hereby straightly charge and Command, That no Person of what Quality soever do presume to come into either of the said Theatres before and during the time of Acting, and until the Plays are quite finished, without paying the Price established for the respective places. And Our further Command is, That the Money which shall be so paid by any Persons for their respective Places shall not be return'd again after it is once paid, notwithstanding that such Persons shall go out at any time before or during the Play; And (to avoid future fraud) That none hereafter shall enter the Pit, First or Upper Gallery without delivering to the respective Doorkeeper the Ticket or Tickets which they received for their Money paid at the first Door. And, forasmuch as 'tis impossible to command those vast Engines (which move the Scenes and Machines) and to order such a number of Persons as must be employed in Works of that nature, if any but such as belong thereunto be suffer'd to press in amongst them; Our Will and Command is, That no Person of what Quality soever presume to stand or sit on the stage, or to come within any part of the Scenes, before the Play begins, while 'tis Acting or after 'tis ended; and We strictly hereby Command Our Officers and Guard of Souldiers which attend the respective Theatres to see this order exactly observ'd, And if any Person whatsoever shall disobey this Our known Pleasure and Command, We shall proceed against them as Contemners of Our Royal Authority, and disturbers of the Publick Peace. Given at Our Court at Whitehall the Second day of February in the Twenty Sixth Year of our reign.—Notes and Queries.

AQUATIC.

NEW YORK YACHT CLUB.

This club had excellent weather for their annual regatta, which was sailed on Thursday, June 16. There were sixteen yachts entered, which were divided into five classes, the prize for the winning yacht in each class being a $380 cup, with two Bennett challenge cups—one for schooners and one for sloops—to the winner of each rig. The course was from a point off Stapleton, S. I., to and around Bony No. 10 on the Southwest Spit, thence to and around Sandy-hook Lightship and return to Buoy 15 on West Bank—a distance of forty miles. When the signal to start was given, at 11.10 A. M., the tide was the last of the flood, and the wind was coming fresh from the northwest. The Clytie, Hildegard, Estelle, Madcap, Dauntless and Vision crossed the imaginary line in succession before the expiration of the ten-minute limit, and all the others were handicapped at 11.20. The Hildegard wrested the lead from the Clytie as they sped through the Narrows, while the Vision sailed into fourth place. Going along the West Bank an hour later, the Clytie, which had been pressing the Hildegard closely, succeeded in regaining the lead, while the Dauntless moved into fourth place, the saucy Vision falling back to eighth. The Mischief and Gracie had a pretty race all to themselves, the latter proving the best at the business. The Clytie turned Buoy 10 at 12.26:20, fifty seconds ahead of the Hildegard, which was the same time in advance of the Estelle, while the Wizard brought up the rear at 12.45:00. The Fanny, one of the large sloops, had the misfortune to lose her topmost, but her crew stuck to their work, and the staunch craft did well under the circumstances. During the run to the lightship the three yachts which had led the others at the first mark held their own, but the Dauntless dropped back to tenth position and the Crusader from fifth to seventh place, while the Tidal Wave advanced from ninth to fifth in line, just behind the Gracie, which had bettered her position two pegs. The order and time of rounding the ship were as follow: Clytie, 1h. 39m. 33s.; Hildegard, 1.40:40; Estelle, 1.41:50; Gracie, 1.42:37; Tidal Wave, 1.43:38; Mischief, 1.44:37; Crusader, 1.45:38; Vision, 1.46:05; Vixen, 1.46:39; Dauntless, 1.47:35; Regina, 1.51:24; Fleetwing, 1.55:00; Fanny, 1.55:15; Wizard, 1.57:20; Madcap, 2.02:00; Southern Cross, 2.05:00. Long tacks to Sandy Hook, succeeded by short legs to the Spit buoy, were now in order, the freshening wind being against the boats. The Hildegard soon ran to the front, followed by the Gracie and Mischief, each having in turn passed the Clytie. The Hildegard lost by standing on one tack too long, and when she turned the Spit buoy, at 3.46:50, she was but a half minute ahead of the Gracie. The wind now gradually died away, and the strong ebb tide made the work difficult. There was no change in the relative positions of the leaders during the run home, the Hildegard finishing first, the Gracie next, Mischief third, and Fanny fourth. The subjoined table gives the starting, finishing, elapsed and corrected sailing times:

FIRST-CLASS KEEL SCHOONERS.

	Start.	Finish.	Elapsed.	Corrected.
Dauntless	12.18:02	5.10:21	5.52:19	5.52:19

Crusader	11.20:00	5.54:56	6.34:56	6.30:58
Clytie	11.18:20	5.55:53	6.40:03	6.35:17
SECOND-CLASS CENTRE-BOARD SCHOONERS.
Estelle	11.16:40	5.54:48	6.38:08	6.38:08
FIRST-CLASS CENTRE-BOARD SLOOPS.
Gracie	11.20:00	4.45:21	5.25:21	5.25:21
Fanny	11.20:00	4.53:15	5.33:15	5.32:26
Mischief	11.20:00	4.47:30	5.27:30	5.22:34
Vision	11.18:07	5.53:07	6.35:00	6.30:00
Hildegard	11.16:15	4.43:10	5.26:55	5.19:00
Wizard	11.20:00	5.53:21	6.33:21	6.10:30
SECOND-CLASS CENTRE-BOARD SLOOPS.
Regina	11.20:00	5.53:39	6.33:39	6.33:39
Vixen	11.20:00	5.51:37	6.31:37	6.30:10

The winners in their respective classes are the Dauntless, Tidal Wave, Estelle, Hildegard and Vixen. The Tidal Wave also wins the Bennett challenge cup for schooners, and the Hildegard carries off, in addition, the Bennett challenge cup for sloops. The prizes were presented at a meeting on board the flagship after the regatta. The chief interest in the regatta centred in the race between the first-class centre-board sloops, which it had been hoped would have proved a good test of their ability to cope with the new Canadian sloop Atlanta; but in consequence of the lack of wind towards the end the contest was not satisfactory as showing which of them is the swiftest craft.

ROWING AT NEW ORLEANS.

Several hundred people witnessed the regatta of the West-end Boat Club of New Orleans, La., held on Monday, June 13. The weather was favorable and the water smooth. STRAWBERRY-HILL REGATTA.

About eight thousand persons assembled to witness this event, which took place at Nantasket Beach, Boston Harbor, Mass., June 17. The weather was favorable and the water just lively enough to be fast. Results: Single-scull race, professional, three miles, with a turn, $200, $75 and $50—George H. Hosmer, first, in 22m. 47s.; James H. Riley second, in 22m. 57s.; Geo. W. Lee third, in 23m. 38s.; T. Doyle, 0. Hosmer got off with an advantage, and, though passed by Riley after entering upon the second mile, he quickly regained the lead and kept it till the end. Single-sculls, amateurs, a silver cup and a gold medal, two miles, with a turn—H. A. Kirby, Narragansett B. C., Providence, R. I., first, in 15m. 57s.; Ralph Brazier, Vesper B. On the 18th professional scullers who had failed to win a prize rowed a consolation race, when the water was better than on the previous day. The contestants were Plaisted and Doyle, and the former won by nearly a quarter of a mile, in 22m. 35s. The purse was $30.

EASTERN YACHT CLUB.

The annual regatta of this club, postponed from June 10 on account of stormy weather, was sailed 15 off Marblehead, Mass. There were eight entries of first-class sloops, three of second-class sloops, and two of second-class schooners. The weather was fine, and the stiff northwest wind sent the boats through the lively blue water at a great rate, while it gave the amateur sailors enough to do to keep their craft right side up, and more than they could do to prevent occasional accident to canvas and sticks. The corrected time of the competing craft at the conclusion of the race was as follows: First-class sloops—L. H. Keith's Siren, 2h. 38m. 54s.; W. H. Forbes' Hesper, 2h. 41m. 4s.; F. E. Peabody's Enterprise, 2h. 41m. 48½s.; A. Hemenway's Anna, 2h. 47m. 57½s.; Chas. P. Horton's Active, 2h. 48m. 12s.; J. L. Stackpole's Imperia, 2h. 51m. 12¾s.; G. W. Benson's Vivia, 2h. 51m. 48s.; J. B. Parker's Recreation, 2h. 54m. 12s. Second-class sloops—John Bryant's Shadow, 2h. 11m. 4½s.; C. G. Wild's Hero, 2h. 15m. 45s. Second-class schooners—F. Dexter's Meta, 2h. 42m. 7s.; D. L. Pickman's Latona, 2h. 42m. 7s. The prizes for first-class sloops were $50 and $30; for second-class schooners, $50; second-class sloops, $30.

REGATTA IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.—On the Queen's Birthday, May 24, a rowing regatta was held at Victoria, British Columbia, with the following result, cash prizes being given in every race: Double-scull boats, under 22 feet—J. Millington and W. Paine won, defeating Ed. Wall and J. Jackson, J. Seeley and G. Wrenworth. Society's race, four-oared—Won by the Foresters. SCHUYLKILL NAVY REGATTA.

This annual event was held on the Schuylkill River, at Philadelphia, on Saturday afternoon, June 18, and as the weather was fine there was a large attendance of spectators. The races were all a mile and a half in length, over the straightaway course from the Falls to Rockland, and the water was in good condition, improving after the single-scull events had been decided, as the wind fell afterwards. A return of the racing follows:

Junior single sculls—Charles R. Simons, Vesper B. C., first, in 11m. 33½s.; Thomas Willoughby, Malta B. C., second, in 12m. 3½s. They got away together, and for a half mile the contest was worth looking at, but then Simons easily went away, and won without trouble.

Senior single sculls—Frank Henderson, Quaker City B. C., first, in 10m. 52¾s.; J. B. Lippincott Jr., Vesper B. C., second, in 11m. 6¾s.; George W. Young, Crescent R. C., third, in 11m. 29s.; Frank S. Pleasanton, Quaker City B. C., fourth. Although having to stop to fix his oarlock, Henderson at the end of a half-mile was a length in front, and he had the easiest sort of a job in defeating his antagonists.

Pair-oared shells—E. S. Hart, T. C. Cheston (stroke), Undine B. C., first, in 10m. 6¾s.; W. D. Hunter, Geo. Sergeant Jr. (stroke), College B. C., second, in 10m. 57¾s.; L. K. Cottingham, M. W. Fulton (stroke), West Philadelphia B. C., did not finish, having started simply to save their entrance-fee. There was nothing exciting or even interesting about this race, so greatly superior were the Undine men.

Junior four-oared gigs—Vesper B. C.: Wm. H. Schell (bow), Charles Thomas, Charles Leedom, R. M. Greene (stroke), F. Pearson (coxswain), first, in 10m. 3s.; Pennsylvania B. C.: H. M. Richards (bow), L. K. Faber, J. B. McNutt, H. M. Swaim (stroke), W. R. Brice (coxswain), second, in 10m. 4s.; Crescent B. C.: George F. Lasher (bow), James F. Sullender, F. C. Milliken, W. T. Wallace (stroke), E. K. Plumly (coxswain), third, in 10m. 7s.; Malta B. C.: James Hutchinson (bow), F. A. Cunningham, Haviland Wright, Thomas H. Downing (stroke), A. C. Rockhill (coxswain), fourth, in 10m. 8s.; Undine B. C.: A. R. Heinitsh (bow), Wm. S. Robinson, Thomas B. Scarborough, Bernard Berens Jr. (stroke), George F. Janney (coxswain), fifth. The latter crew were the favorites, and the result was a surprise, the Undines being out of the race at the end of a half mile, when the Vespers were leading. At the mile point the latter had clear water on the Pennsylvanias, who were close pressed by the Crescents and Maltas. A quarter of a mile from the finish, when the issue was settled, the Maltas spurted gamely, but failed to gain what they were working for—second place. It was the closest and most interesting event of the regatta.

Four-oared shells—College B. C.: W. Dickerson (bow), J. T. Barnhurst, T. G. Hunter, R. L. Hart (stroke), first, in 8m. 58¾s.; Crescent B. C.: C. E. Steel (bow), M. W. Phillips, C. P. Tasker, C. E. Hallowell (stroke), second, in 9m. 9s.; Undine B. C.: R. T. Middleton (bow), Mahon Hutchinson, O. P. Smith, W. F. Wilcox (stroke), third, in 9m. 20s. The College boys at once began to forge ahead, and at the end of a quarter-mile were more than a length in front, which they had increased to a half dozen when two-thirds of the journey had been gone over. The Crescents had lost considerable by having to unship their starboard oars to avoid collision with a canal boat at the half-mile mark. The victory was now assured to the College crew; but the others had a sharp contest for some distance, ending in the Crescents securing a firm hold on second place.

Double scull shells—W. H. Macdonald, Harvey McMillan (stroke), Vesper B. C., first, in 10m. 13s.; Frank Henderson, Eugene T. Linnard (stroke), Quaker City B. C., second, in 10m. 25s.; W. B. Cobb, F. W. Street (stroke), Pennsylvania B. C., did not finish. The Vespers were the leaders throughout. The steering of the Quakers was execrable, the boat at one time being run into the West bank.

Senior four-oared gigs—Vesper B. C.: W. H. Macdonald (bow), Chas. R. Simons, J. B. Lippincott Jr., W. H. McMillan (stroke), Chas. F. Godshall (coxswain), first, in 9m. 48s.; Malta B. C.: Wm. S. Moore (bow), Wm. K. Evans, Horace Draper, Edwin Ilman (stroke), Wm. Trimble Jr. (coxswain), second, in 9m. 58s. The Maltas took the lead and held it for over a quarter of a mile, when the Vespers got upon even terms, and the next quarter was hotly contested, the Vespers outlasting their opponents, who at the half claimed foul. The oars of the two crews were interlocked, but the referee denied the claim because there was no contact of the oar blades.

Six-oared barges—College B. C.: D. Milne (bow), G. Serreant Jr., W. Dickerson, J. T. Barnhurst, T. G. Hunter, R. L. Hart (stroke), MacP. Hornor (coxswain), first, in 9m. 39¾s.; Vesper B. C.: E. J. Hasse (bow), C. C. Rhodes, Wm. H. Schell, Chas. Thomas, Chas. Leedom, E. M. Greene (stroke), W. H. McMillan (coxswain), second, in 9m. 58¾s. Pennsylvania B. C.: F. M. Longstreth (bow), A. L. Kapper, F. M. Hartley, John S. Kuhn Jr., C. J. Swaim, J. M. Andrews, F. W. Street (coxswain), did not finish. They got off evenly, and for some distance a good contest ensued, but the college crew had the race quite safe at the end of a quarter-mile, easily shaking off the plucky efforts of the Vespers to get up. In passing inside of a canal-boat Swaim of the Pennsylvanias snapped his oar short off and, although he relieved the boat by at once jumping overboard, the crew did not long continue the unequal struggle.

Eight-oared shells—College B. C.: A. S. Reeves (bow), W. M. Stewart Jr., W. D. Hunter, G. Sergeant Jr., W. Dickerson, J. T. Barnhurst, T. G. Hunter, R. L. Hart (stroke), MacP. Hornor (coxswain), rowed over in 8m. 33s.

NEW YORK ATHLETIC CLUB.

The annual regatta of this club was held on the Harlem River June 18. The weather was delightful, the water smooth, and the gathering of sightseers quite large. The course for all the races was but a half mile in length, straight-away, rowing from McComb's Dam Bridge down stream. Result: Single-scull shells, handicap—J. Maginn, scratch, first, in 3m. 16¼s.; C. H. Leibert, 12sec., second, by a length; M. T. Hart, 5, third; J. L. Graham, 15, fourth; S. Muir, 15, ran into an outside, of which there were a number to annoy the scullers, and did not finish. Four-oared shells—C. Johnson (bow), W. H. O'Donnell, F. A. Buckman, J. Maginn (stroke), first, in 2m. 43½s.; Geo. D. Phillips (bow), J. R. Curran, Waldo Sprague, A. B. Wilson (stroke), second, by a long distance; W. G. Demarest (bow), Thos. R. Keator, W. F. Shaw, M. T. Hard (stroke), fouled Wilson's crew and were disqualified. Pair-oared gigs—First heat: G. D. Phillips, A. B. Wilson (stroke), B. C. Williams (coxswain), first, in 3m. 22½s.; M. Pattison, J. Maginn (stroke), W. M. Andrus (coxswain), second. Second heat: M. T. Hard, F. A. Buckman (stroke), W. M. Andrus (coxswain), first, in 3m. 32½s.; F. K. Berlin, C. M. Graham (stroke), B. C. Williams (coxswain), second. Final heat: Hard and Buckman first, in 2m. 53¾s.; Phillips and Wilson second. Eight-oared shells—W. H. O'Donnell (bow), C. E. Johnson, W. F. Shaw, W. G. Demarest, W. Moser, M. C. Pattison, J. Maginn, Waldo Sprague (stroke), W. M. Andrus (coxswain) and J. R. Curran (bow), A. W. Dunning, G. D. Phillips, O. Sarony, H. T. Keyser, F. A. Buckman, M. T. Hard (stroke), B. C. Williams (coxswain) rowed a dead heat in 2m. 30¾s. A. H. Curtis was finish-judge, F. E. Hough timekeeper, and H. W. Walters referee.

BOSTON CITY REGATTA.—The programme for the annual rowing regatta, which forms one of the main features of the celebration of the Fourth of July at Boston, Mass., is as follows: Single-scull working-boats, three miles; first prize, $100; second, $50. Amateur scullers, three miles; first prize, City of Boston Cup; value, $100; second, City of Boston Cup; value, $50. Professional scullers, three miles; first prize, $200; second, $100. Heretofore it has been the custom to hold the regatta at an early hour in the morning, but this year it will commence at four o'clock in the afternoon.

VIKING BOAT CLUB.—This Elizabeth, N. J., boat club held their Spring regatta at Bayonne, N. J., June 18, with the results here shown, the distance in every race being one mile, with a turn: Pair-oared gigs—G. B. Moorewood Jr., H. F. Moorewood (stroke), J. L. Myers (coxswain), first, in 7m. 20s.; W. B. Harrison, W. B. Moorewood (stroke), B. Darragh (coxswain), second. Pair-oared shells—H. E. Duncan, John H. Stoddard (stroke), first, in 7min.; C. H. K. Halsey, D. A. Woodhouse (stroke), second. Four-oared barges, Ingraham Challenge-cup—J. L. Myers (bow), W. B. Harrison, D. A. Woodhouse, C. H. K. Halsey (stroke), L. W. Kingsley (coxswain), first, in 6m. 32s.; Frank Hiller (bow), H. F. Moorewood, John H. Stoddard, H. E. Duncan Jr. (stroke), B. Darragh (coxswain), second.

PRINCETON VS. RUTGERS.—A mile-and-a-half race was rowed on the Raritan River at New Brunswick, N. J., June 18. The crews were made up thus: Princeton—Cowan, '81 (bow), Jennison, '83, Howell, '83, Baker, '83 (stroke). Rutgers—Laubenheimer, '81 (bow), Verbryck, '81, Bierman, '83, Sprout, '84 (stroke). Rutgers led for the first quarter-mile, when their shell ran aground, and before they could float her again the Princetons were nearly a half mile ahead. The latter won in 8m. 4s.

THE RECEIPTS at the recent regatta of the Passaic River A. R. A. reached nearly a thousand dollars, more than sufficient to meet all expenses, and leave a good balance in the treasury after the assessment of twenty-five dollars had been returned to each of the clubs comprising the Association. This is indicative of good management, and liberal patronage.

THE OTTAWA REGATTA.—For the professional scullers' race which is to take place at Ottawa, Ont., Canada, on Dominion-day, July 1, the following entries are now announced: J. H. Riley, Wallace Ross, G. H. Hosmer, J. Gaudaur, F. H. Koutz of Toronto, E. McDonald of Ottawa, and Fred A. Plaisted.

HARRY KELLEY, the ex-champion oarsman of England, who came to this country with Trickett, had the misfortune to slip, fall and break his leg while sparring with the latter at their quarters, on the banks of Saratoga Lake, June 17.

THE DATE of the four-oared race between Princeton and the University of Pennsylvania has been changed to June 30, as one of the inter-collegiate cricket matches is to be played on the 29th, the date originally fixed.

THE Bay of Quinte Yacht Club of Belleville, Ont., having received notification that the same vessel will compete against the Atlanta in all three races for the America Cup, were to meet June 21 and perfect arrangements for the races.

THE match race between Dr. Johnson's yacht Lizzie L. and Rear-commodore Howell's Pirate, for $500, has been declared off.

TRICKETT expresses a desire for a meeting on the water with Courtney. Should the latter accommodate him, come to 1 s post well and fit, and start against the Australian, this ought to be a great betting event.

THE BALTIMORE CALEDONIANS.

The eighth annual festival and games of the Baltimore (Md.) Caledonian Club was held at Scheutzen Park on Monday, June 13. Dancing progressed while the sports were going on, and after they were concluded flying feet kept time to the music until the hour of midnight, when the lassies and laddies betook themselves homeward, having enjoyed a day's rare sport.

PRICE vs. McDONALD.

In presence of a very small body of spectators the match in which Charles Price conceded P. J. McDonald a start of one minute in five miles, for one hundred dollars a side, was decided at the grounds of the Manhattan A. C., in this city, June 18. McDonald gained a little more than a lap and a half in his allowance, and completed his first mile in 4m. 48⅘s., a quarter of a second less than Price occupied in going the same distance. Mac slackened during the next mile, which he was 5m. 29⅘s. in covering, while Price took twelve seconds less. The latter was rapidly cutting down the distance between them, and it was plain that he was much more than a match for McDonald, who lost heart as his legs failed him, and he quit after running two miles and about three hundred and fifty yards. His performance was very disappointing. Price continued to run until he had completed the full distance, his time at the end of every mile being as follows: One, 4m. 48⅘s.; two, 10m. 6s.; three, 15m. 48⅘s.; four, 21m. 29⅘s.; five, 27m. 5s. McDonald's time for two miles was 10m. 18s. Had McDonald been able to do as well as had been expected of him, there is little doubt that the winner would have had to beat American record-time; but, as it was, the previous best figures remained unshaken.

HAMILTON COLLEGE GAMES.

These annual sports were held at Hamilton, O., June 11, with the results here shown: 100yds. run—Whiteman, '81, first, in 10⅘sec.; Dalzell, '84, second. Putting 40lb. shot—Donaldson, '84, 22ft. 7in.; Bumpus, '81, second. Running broad-jump—Bassett, '84, 19ft. 1in.; De Garmo, '81, second. Running high-jump—Rodgers, '83, 4ft 9in.; Bumpus, '81, second. Running hop-skip-and-jump—Bassett, '84, 39ft. 8in.; De Garmo, '81, second. Quarter-mile run—Giroux, '84, first, in 59¼sec.; Barber, '84, second. Standing-jump, with weights—Bassett, '84, 12ft.; Bumpus, '81, second. One-mile walk—Spencer, '82, first, in 8m. 39s.; Bumpus, '81, second. Three-mile run—Donaldson, '84, first, in 21m. 15⅘sec.; Giroux, '84, second. Tug-of-war—Sophomores vs. Freshmen; won by Sophomores.

BEST-ON-RECORD TIMES.

At the meeting of the London Athletic Club held at Stamford Bridge, London, England, May 28, the mile-and-a-half race was won from scratch by G. M. Nehan, L. A. C., in 7m. 6s., which is the fastest amateur record for that distance, beating J. Gibbs' time by eight seconds. At the same meeting H. D. Thomas won the mile challenge cup in 4m. 27⅘s., and in his trial heat in the club 300yds. handicap W. P. Phillips, scratch, was beaten three yards in 31⅘s. C. L. Lockton (owing 16yds) ran in the "hurdles," winning his trial heat with ease; but in the final, while holding a good lead, he struck the last flight but one and went out of the race..... At the Small Heath Harriers sports, Birmingham, held the same day, W. Snook, Moseley Harriers, also eclipsed the amateur two-mile record, covering the distance in 9m. 53⅘s., which excelled W. Slade's time by eight and three-fifth seconds. Slade's time had stood as the best for nearly five years.

SCOTTISH-AMERICAN ATHLETIC CLUB.—Handicap games were held by this club at their grounds, on West Fifty-fourth street, this city, June 18, with the following result: One-hundred-yards race—First heat: E. H. Anderson, 3yds. start, first in 12⅘s.; W. C. Richardson, scratch, second, by two feet; Second heat: J. O'Carroll, 8 first, in 11⅘s.; J. Y. Abbott, 4, second, by six inches. Anderson, 35, third. Medley race, run one lap, run backwards half a lap, hop half a lap, and run a lap over 2ft. 6in. hurdles, 660yds, in all—T. J. Murphy first, Guy Vesey second.

DEATH OF HARRY CLIFTON.

But a few weeks have elapsed since we with pleasure announced the opening by that popular metropolitan refreshment caterer Harry Clifton of a new English steak and chop house at No. 34 West Thirtieth street. We were pleased because the proprietor was a worthy citizen, who we were confident would here find the continuation of that business prosperity which was interrupted when he several years ago made the mistake of locating in an out-of-the-way spot on the East-side. He gave to the new place the quaint old-country title of "The Gate Tavern," and upon the invitations to the opening appeared a picture of an old-fashioned gate swinging from the trunk of a tree, upon the five bars of which was the following: "The gate hangs well, and hinders none; refresh and pay, and travel on." Old friends, including many members of the histrionic, legal, journalistic and other professions, with well-known business and society men, and not a few of the better class of those who love sport, gathered in the handsome, cosy new place and welcomed "Harry" to their midst again, while they drained their glasses in drinking to his health and prosperity. Little did he or any one else imagine on that merry 21st of May that to him soon would apply the last clause of the legend borne upon the bars of the gate—"refresh and pay and travel on." Such, however, is the sad fact. Just as the future seemed to shine outbrightly and full of promise before him he was called upon to pay that which sooner or later is expected of all human kind, and to travel on to the unknown land. It appears that about ten days ago Mr. Clifton, who was suffering from an attack of biliousness, took an overdose of medicine, which brought on a severe spell of sickness. Upon awaking on the morning of Friday, June 17, he seemed to feel better, but soon afterwards he was seized with a violent fit of coughing and retching, which produced internal hemorrhage, speedily resulting in death. His unexpected demise was a terrible blow to his wife and family, and to his brother Charley, while its suddenness startled a community in which he had earned a reputation for honesty and fair-dealing, and expressions of regret were general and sincere. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, 19, from his late residence, and it was very numerously attended by men of prominence in the metropolis and Brooklyn, including Hubert O. Thompson, Commissioner of Public Works; Wm. P. Mitchell, Excise Commissioner; and Alderman Thomas Sheils. The interment was in Calvary Cemetery, and a number of carriages containing friends followed the remains to the beautiful city of the dead. Deceased was born at the inn known as the Spread Eagle, kept by his father at Fargate, Sheffield, Yorkshire, Eng.; and while yet in his teens he and his brother Charles came to seek their fortunes in the States. Harry was employed soon after his arrival by the then well-known refreshment caterers Clark & Brown, who were among the first to carry on in this city an ale and chop house conducted on the English plan, and whose establishment was then a favorite resort. Subsequently Clifton was employed as bartender at the Home House, Broadway and Great Jones street, then in the heydey of its popularity, and later his services were secured by Harry Foster, who kept a prosperous establishment at Broadway and Walker street. About 1864 he embarked in business for himself in East Houston street, between Broadway and Crosby streets, where he opened a first-class ale and chop house that in time became one of the most noted establishments of its kind in the city. Here he remained for about ten years, in company with his brother, during the greater part of which time business flourished and Harry was enabled by good management to amass quite a competency. The brothers were both of a genial nature, everything was conducted in A1 style, and while the Cliftons became exceedingly popular and made hosts of friends, the house became one of the chief resorts of that large class of metropolitans who know how to appreciate the comfort and good cheer inseparable from a well managed English chop house. Actors, artists, men of letters, successful business men, shining lights in the medical and other professions, with gentlemen identified with different branches of legitimate indoor and outdoor sports, were wont to daily clink glasses over the bar or discuss the topics of the day while they struck heels beneath the rosewood and mahogany. Clifton was quite a critic in art matters, too, and, being fond of pictures, the walls of his parlors were covered with oil paintings, water colors, etc., including some gems, the "art gallery" being quite a feature of the establishment, as was the "Yorkshire Stingo" dispensed over the bar and the prime roast beef and Yorkshire pudding which were to be obtained there at noon every day in the year. As the march of improvement carried trade farther up-town, however, business gradually fell off, the character of Houston street changed, and Harry finally concluded to leave the old spot, so fraught with pleasant memories, and go with the upward tide. This he did some seven years ago; but, unfortunately, he selected a poor site when he chose a lot and a two-story frame house on the east-side of Lexington avenue, near Thirty-first street. There he remained with his family, and he transformed the lower floor of the dwelling into an attractive and snug English chop-house. He was too far out of the way for his former patrons to follow him, however, and in that part of the city he could not expect to do more than sufficient business to make a little better than a good living—not many men beside himself could have done so well. During the past year he had been looking out for a place better suited to a man of his energy and active temperament, and this he at last found in the four-story brown stone dwelling on Thirtieth street, one door east of Broadway, and almost opposite the site of Wallack's new theatre. This he altered to meet the requirements of the business for which he intended it, and, having rented his other place to good advantage, he on May 21 opened the handsomest chop-house in this city, and which under his management bade fair to become in course of time very valuable property. Had he made the move several years earlier, it would doubtless have been better for himself financially and otherwise. Naturally bright and intelligent and having received good instruction in his boyhood, and read much on various subjects as he grew older, while he was blessed with a retentive memory, Harry possessed a fund of general and useful information, and was most excellent company. He made many warm friendships with leading members of the dramatic and kindred professions, dealt squarely with everybody, and was openhearted and generous by nature. He leaves a wife, two daughters and a son.

MANHATTAN ATHLETIC CLUB.—A special Summer meeting of this club will be held at their grounds, Fifth-sixth street and Eighth avenue, this city, on Monday, July 4, at 4 P. M. The following games are open to all amateurs: 100yds. run, handicap; 220yds. run, for those who have never beaten 27sec.; 300yds. run, handicap; 600yds. run, for those who have never won a first prize at this distance in open competition; half-mile run, handicap; one-mile run, handicap, limit 75 yards; 220yds. hurdle-race, handicap, limit 15 yards; one-mile bicycle-race, handicap, limit 100 yards; one-mile walk, special handicap, for those who have a record of eight minutes or better; individual tug-of-war, 150lb stripped. An entrance-fee of 50c. for each and every event. Right to reject any entry is reserved. Prizes on exhibition at McCue Bros.', No. 192 Broadway. The rules of the National Association will govern all contests. Handicapping to be done by the handicapper of the National Association. Entries close positively June 28 with the secretary, W. HOSE ROSE.—The Deere Hose Co. of Moline, Ill., had a friendly contest in a three-hundred-yard run with the Wide-awake Hose Co. of Rock Island, Ill., laying hose and making coupling (hauling their cart), and came out ahead by twelve seconds in 48sec.; Rock Island, 60sec. At the State tournament at Council Bluffs, Ia., the Deeres came in third, first prize being taken by Decatur, Ill., in 42sec., and the second by the Council Bluffs team. The Deeres made their run in 36sec., but slipped up in coupling, as the metal in the coupling was soft, and they ran first and had the disadvantage, it being changed after their run, thus giving rival companies the advantage of a good coupling. Deere Hose is a new company, organized in the Deere Plow Works, and made a good record, running as they did against old and practiced teams, and a professional team from Council Bluffs.

MANHATTAN POLO ASSOCIATION.—An amateur athletic meeting will be held on the Polo Grounds, 110th street and Sixth avenue, under the auspices of the Manattan Polo Association, on Saturday afternoon, July 2, at four o'clock. Entries close Saturday, June 25, with H. Foderingham, P. O. box 1,589, New York City.

THE ASTLEY BELT.—What will doubtless prove to be the final contest for this trophy commenced at the Marble Rink on the Clapham Road, London, Eng., at the customary hour on the morning of Monday, June 20, the only contestants being Charles Rowell and E. P. Weston. The former at once commenced to go away from his opponent, and as the latter, who was sick and off the track several hours during the day, continued to fall rapidly behind, the slight interest manifested in the affair at first greatly diminished, and the race went on before a mere handful of spectators during the afternoon and evening. At midnight Weston was fifty-five miles behind Rowell, who had retired to rest a half hour before, having scored 140 miles and the American 85. At 3 P. M. 21 the scores were Rowell, 196 miles; Weston, 147.

PROF. JOHN M. CANNON, athlete, and formerly superintendent of the Cincinnati Gymnasium, died in Crittenden, Ky., June 14, of consumption, from which he had suffered for a year or more. In a recent issue we announced a verdict for $7,500 rendered in his favor in a suit for $20,000 damages instituted against James Landy, a Cincinnati photographer, for personal injuries inflicted in a set-to in the gymnasium in March, 1880, the allegation being that the disease which resulted in Cannon's death was induced by blows inflicted by Landy. The Court had ordered a new trial of the case. On Jan. 16, 1875, deceased lifted 1,250lb on the health-lift machine.

A NOVEL and highly-amusing race was added to an excellent athletic programme at the Rochester F. C. Sports, Eng., May 28, the competitors not only having to negotiate hurdles, but to wriggle under a pole raised a few inches from the ground, and crawl through a barrel.

THE TRACK upon which the recent one-hundred-hour go-as-you-please race at Elmira, N. Y., was decided was measured by City-surveyor McKinney, and found to require twenty-three and one-half laps to complete a mile. The manager, Sam Miller (evidently a relative of Burt Miller, inventor of the now famous "Miller mile"), however, had the scoring done at the rate of twenty laps to the mile.

A NEW ARRIVAL.

Among the arrivals at this port from England on Sunday, June 19, was W. C. Davies of the Westminster Rowing Club, London. This is the young gentleman who won the gold medal emblematic of the twelve-hour championship in a go as-you-please contest at Agricultural Hall, London, Sept. 9, 1880, upon which occasion he was credited with the best time on record for every mile from fifty one to eighty-one, inclusive. Some time ago he forwarded his entry for the twenty four-hour amateur go-as-you-please race announced to be given by D. E. Rose at the Hippodrome, Coney Island, June 22, and his object in crossing the ocean was to compete in said race. He was much surprised to learn upon arrival that Mr. Rose had abandoned the idea of giving an amateur race, owing to action taken by the National Association, as he had not received any notification from the promoter. It is not right that a man should be put to such expense for nothing; and now that Davies is here, it is to be hoped that he will not suffer pecuniarily in consequence of the neglect of other persons. Davies is of medium stature, well built, and a very likely-looking young man for such a race.

OFF THE REEL.

On Monday, June 20, after the baseball match between the knights of the greencloth was over, some sport of an impromptu character was had. Jack Goulding was putting William McCoskey through his sprinting trials, when some of the billiardists who lingered at the Polo Grounds remarked that he was a poor runner, and that they had a man who could down him. As McCoskey would not run for money, it was agreed to have a go at one hundred yards just for sport's sake. When the signal was given Mac went off like a shot, and ran through while his opponent, H. King, stood at the mark. As about $150 had been wagered upon the result, a wrangle ensued, and to end it McCoskey consented to run again, when he defeated King by a yard and a half in 11sec. We understand that McCoskey has made a match to give King five yards in one hundred, and run in three weeks, for a medal valued at twenty-five dollars.

THE CAPITOL BICYCLE CLUB held their annual races in the Iowa Circle, at Washington, D. C., June 18, in presence of an estimated attendance of six thousand. Over one hundred riders took part in the preliminary parade. The first race, one mile, open to all, start to be made from a stand-still, was won by H. M. Schooley; time, 3m. 14⅘s. The second race, a quarter-of-a-mile dash, for members only, was run by each contestant singly, with a flying start, and was won by A. M. Coyle in 46⅘sec. The third race, five miles, start to be made from a stand-still, was won by J. McK. Borden in 18m. 42⅘s. The fourth was a juvenile race for boys on wooden machines. The fifth race, one mile, for members of the Capitol Bicycle Club only, was won by George Cook in 3m. 20⅘s. A three-mile dash, open to all, was won by H. Stewart after a desperate struggle in the last mile. Time, 10m.

HAPPY JACK SMITH had so much confidence in the ability of Geo. Littlewood to win the recent race for the O'Leary international belt that he bet all his cash on the result, and, as a consequence, the close of the race found his pocketbook flatter than smooth water. In order to get him off his beam-ends again it is proposed to give him a complimentary testimonial in the shape of a grand athletic entertainment at Sulzer's Harlem-river Park, Second avenue and 123d street, Harlem, on Friday, July 15, afternoon and evening. A series of interesting pedestrian and other events will take place, including a fifty-mile run by George Hazael and Dennis Donovan, and a five-mile race between Charles Price and John Raine. Dancing will commence in the afternoon, and continue as far into next morning as the boys and girls want to keep it up.

TWO FOOT RACES came off at Quincy, Mass., June 18. The first, five miles, was won by Luke Mulligan in 35min.; Joseph Langford second. The two-mile race, for boys, was won by Prout of Weymouth, with Foye second.

W. H. JOHNSON has reached Detroit on his tour, and he and Robt. Wright lost no time in arranging a match (?), which is to be decided at the Detroit Opera-house to-night, June 22.

JERRY MURPHY was the winner of a dash of 125yds. at Danvers, Mass., June 16, defeating T. H. Raferty, in 13½sec. Stakes, $200.

WE HAVE a letter for Charles Price.

AN UNDECIDED WRESTLING CONTEST.

Concerning the alleged mixed wrestling match between John McMahon and John McGillick, which attracted about one hundred people to Clark's Boxing Academy, Philadelphia, June 15, we have received the following communication from John H. Clark:

PHILADELPHIA, June 19, 1881.

FRANK QUKEN, ESQ.—Dear Sir: I wish to make a statement regarding the McMahon-McGillick wrestling match. The former, who had been confined to his bed for four weeks, only wrestled to oblige McGillick, who was in need of a few dollars. A few weeks previously they had hot words about their respective styles of wrestling, when I made a proposition offering them $ 50 if the house took in that amount; if not, they were to receive $100 sure. It appears that previously to the day fixed upon a private agreement was entered into between them whereby McMahon was to win two falls out of the three, he fearing that he could not do himself justice, owing to his bad ankle. He was to win at Graeco-Roman and collar-and-elbow styles, so as to give his friends confidence to back him. and McGillick was to have parties present with money enough to accept all offers. McMahon did not suspect his opponent, and, being unprepared for such work as McGillick put in, he was thrown at Graeco-Roman holds, losing the first fall. After this bout McMahon told me about the agreement. He won the choice of styles for the next bout, which he quickly won in collar and-elbow fashion. Knowing McGillick could win at catch-as-catch can, McMahon then refused to go on, for the stated reason that McGillick had broken the contract between them. I told them I should return the admission money; and when McGillick saw I was determined, he said that if I would give him one-half the receipts he would let McMahon down him. I refused to listen to such a proposition, and went on the stage and told the people the match was not square, and that they could go to the box-office and get their money back, which they did, with the exception of several gentlemen who said they had seen their money's worth, and gave me credit for doing what I did. I lost on the match, but felt happy in downing a man who tried to put on the double cross. Yours respectfully, JOHN H. CLARK.

It is plain that, by the terms of the private agreement alleged to have been entered into by the principals, the only parties it was designed to swindle were those who might bet their money on McGillick. Whether the latter at the time intended adhering to this agreement or not, it is patent that he was wrestling to win on the night they took hold, and, such being the case, the proper thing for Clark to have done would have been to let the contest progress till won and lost on the merits of the men, which it was evident it would have been had they come together for the third bout. In case McMahon refused to go on again, McGillick should have been given the money. The former was willing that his opponent's friends should be swindled, and therefore did not deserve protection.

THE ALL UNITED STATES HANDICAP.

The third 135yds. pedestrian handicap promoted by Messrs. Clark, Gormley & Dawson, will take place at Scattergood's track, Philadelphia, July 4, 5. CHICAGO ATHLETIC CLUB.

This club held their first public games at the White Stocking Baseball Park, Chicago, Ill., June 18. Rain interfered, yet the programme was carried out, excepting the tug-of-war and sparring. The track was heavy and slow. The officers were: E. P. Simpson, referee and judge of walking; judges—Thomas V. Connor, Geo. Lunt and Geo. T. Muchmore; timekeepers—C. S. Downs, A. W. Sullivan and Leason Thompson; starter, Geo. Giroux; clerk of course, Prof. C. O. Duplessis. The events and winners were:

One-hundred-yard run—G. W. Hancock first, in 12¼sec.; C. J. Williams second.

Pole-leaping—John Cowling first, 6ft. 8in.; James Corbett, 6ft.

CONEY ISLAND JOCKEY CLUB.

The only thing needed to make absolutely perfect the opening day of the June meeting of this club on Wednesday, 18, was a good track. The weather was delightful, the assemblage large and brilliant, and the starter's bell brought to the post a number of high-class thoroughbreds; but the rain, which fell so heavily the evening before upon ground which had not yet recovered from the repeated soakings it had received during the previous week, left the track in a very miry condition. After the rain had ceased, however, men were set to work sponging off the water, and next morning the use of harrow and scraper, aided by a warm sun and a brisk northwest wind, wrought a great improvement, so that the going, although heavy, was much better than had been expected. The sport commenced with a five-furlong dash, $500, for which no less than thirteen answered the summons. The result was a victory for the favorite, Sir Hugh (3yrs., 104lb), finishing two lengths ahead of Bonnie Lizzie (3—102), who was half as far ahead of Bliss (3—102), with Victim (117) next. Time, 1:04¼. The second event was the Tidal Stakes, for three-year-olds, $100 each, $1,000 added, which was won by Hindoo (118) by one length from Crickmore (115), who certainly pushed the favorite throughout, as the time, 1:43¼—exceedingly fast for so heavy a track—proves. Saunterer (118), George Lorillard's fast colt, was fifty yards to the bad at the close. These were the only starters. A selling-race, $500, a mile and a furlong, was next, and the winner turned up in Warfield (6—107), who was also the favorite, and who passed the post a short head in advance of Big Medicine (4—105), Gossip (3—80), third, Elise, Woodcraft, Ingomar, Surge and Gammacita following in this order. Time, 1:59. Maidens of all ages then contended in a mile-and-a-quarter race, for $500, and this resulted in the only upset which the betting fraternity received during the day. Sir Walter (3—103) was made a favorite, mainly because he belongs to G. L. Lorillard, with Vici (3—103) for second choice, but neither succeeded in getting a place, Aurora's Baby (4—84) winning by a head from Regicide (3—103), who was a half length in front of Harry O. (4—118), with Vici fourth, Sir Walter fifth, and Lilly Monson last. Time, 2:16. The last event of the afternoon was the June Steeplechase, a sweepstakes of $25 each, $700 added, short course, which was won with ease by Disturbance (aged—150), about fifty yards before Glenlivet (5—130), Frank Short a poor third, and Tom Kinsella, whose rider fell, last. Time, 4:15..... The weather was equally fine on the following day, the attendance larger, and the track improved, although still somewhat slow. The first race was three-quarters of a mile, $500, and it had nine starters, of whom Thora (3—102) finished first, a length in front of Victim (5—117), who was a head before Charley Ross (aged—120), Checkmate (6—117), Blue Lodge (4—113), Wyanoke (2—74), Bliss (3—102), Greenland (3—107, and By-the-way (3—102) coming home in this order. Time, 1:16. The Foam Stakes, a sweep of $25 each, with $1,000 added, for two-year-olds, five furlongs, was won by Gerald (110), a length before Memento (107), with Olivia (107) third and Onondaga (110) fourth. Nine others started. Time, 1:02¼. A mile-heat race, $700, was next, and, as with both previous races, the non-favorite won, Glenmore (6—114) taking the second and third heats, after Dan Sparling (5—114) had won the first. Ferida (5—109) was a hot favorite, with Oden (4—108) for second choice, the former finishing third in the first heat and second in the second, while Oden was second in the first heat and third in the second. Time, 1:42½, 1:42¼, 1:46¼. The state of the track considered, the time was very good indeed, and is evidence that Glenmore is not, as some had supposed, "a little off." The fourth and final event of the day was a steeplechase, $600, over the short course, and of the five horses entered Highland Fling (aged—148) was a big favorite, and, behaving himself far better than he usually does, he started well, got the lead early, retained it till the finish, and won by a neck from Zeta (5—138), who was all of eight lengths in front of Dispute (5—143½), who was followed by Woodman and Vigilant. Time, 4:06.....

Besides being one of the loveliest days of the rather backward season, the fact that the Coney Island Cup was among the half dozen attractive events on the card, having for starters the famous Luke Blackburn, Monitor, Glenmore, Parole and Uncas, served to attract to the grounds about 20,000 people on June 18. Among the crowd were very many ladies. The opening race was a selling event, $500, one mile, and it had fifteen starters, including a lot of good horses, of whom Victim (5—117) took the pot, Big Medicine (4—96) a length away, and the same distance in front of Marchioness (5—91), Topsy (5—88), Fourth, Dan K., Vagrant, Milan, Valkyrie, Belle, Elise, Kitty Clark, Baby, Edith, Juanita and Startle, passing the post in this order. Time, 1:42¼. The winner was so little fancied for this event that mutual pools paid $181.65 for five dollars. Next came the event of the meeting, the Coney Island Cup, for three-year-olds and upwards, $50 entrance, $1,500 added, two miles and a quarter. There had been reports in circulation for some days regarding Luke Blackburn's unfitness for such a race, it being stated that he was suffering from cracked heels, and it was even asserted that his trainer, Rowe, advised that he be scratched. It was thought, however, that if the Dwyers started him that fact was sufficient evidence that he was able to win, and, generally refusing to credit the rumors flying about, people put their money on him freely at odds of two to one. The result, however, proved that there was truth in the stories told, for, after following Uncas (5—114) in the latter's fast mile run (1:43½) Blackburn (4—108) assumed the lead, was a length and a half ahead at the quarter-pole on the last mile, but fell back on the backstretch, and was passed by Monitor (5—118) at the three-furlong pole, Glenmore (6—114) also going past immediately afterwards. At the half Monitor was a neck ahead of Glenmore, who led Blackburn a half-length, Parole close up and Uncas in the rear. As they entered the homestretch Glenmore made his effort, got in front after a hard struggle, and landed the biggest event of his creditable career by nearly two lengths from Monitor, who was a half-length in advance of Parole, the latter having made a gallant effort on the last quarter. Blackburn, shorn of his greatness, was a score of lengths behind, with Uncas afar off, having been taken in hand after he had performed his mission by getting Luke to follow him during the early part of the contest. Time, 3:58⅝. There was intense excitement during the running of the last three quarters of a mile, and at the close gallant Glenmore and his happy Jockey, Holloway, received a tremendous ovation, while an enthusiastic admirer garlanded the old horse with flowers. It was a sad day for the hitherto invincible Luke Blackburn and his rider, Jimmy McLaughlin; but it is just possible that the latter might have been saved the pangs of defeat had he refrained from following Uncas when the latter made the pace so hot at the start for the sole purpose of trying to break Blackburn down. The next race was a free handicap sweepstakes, $50 each, $750 added, heats of a mile and a furlong, and for this Ferida (5—114), notwithstanding the indifferent showing made by her on the 16th, was made a big favorite. The result showed that she was not then good enough to appear in such company, as she finished second in the first heat, won by Krupp Gun (6—100), and was fourth in the next, taken by George McCullough (5—114), who also won the third heat and race. Ingomar (4—86) was fourth in the first heat and third in the next. Time, 1:56, 1:57, 2:00. The next race was for gentlemen riders, $15 each, $300 added, three-quarters of a mile, and was won by Edelweiss (4—147), ridden by Arthur Hunter, in 1:17½; Suannanoo (aged—135) second, Dorothy Vernor (4—140) third. Four others started. A maiden race, $500, a mile and a quarter, was fifth, and it was won by Rambler (2—77), a length ahead of Clarendon (4—118), second, two lengths before Erdenheim (4—118), Vici, Regicide and Harry O. following. Time, 2:12. Bob Swim also started, but in going around the lower turn he fell against the rail, breaking his foreleg and throwing his jockey, Evans, heavily. The afternoon's fine sport closed with a handicap steeplechase, regular course, $800, which was won by Disturbance (150), Derby (153) second by a hundred yar is, and half as far ahead of Highland Fling (157), who was heavily handicapped when he sulked and stopped at the seven-furlong pole, kicking himself so badly that it was feared his injuries would prevent him running in future. Frank Short (135) and Tom Kinsella (135) also ran, the former bolting early and the latter falling. Time, 5:57.

THE BRADFORD RACES.

The Spring meeting at the Driving Park, Bradford, Pa., commenced June 14. The 3:00 class, $500, was won by J. F. Leonard, Straight Edge second. Time, 2:37⅝, 2:39¾, 2:39. In the 2:24 race, $500, Amber got the first heat in 2:32, and Valley Chief the next three. Time, 2:29, 2:30, 2:32¼. The running race, mile heats, $250, was taken by Proctor Knott, Rambo second. Time, 1:52. On the 15th the 2:34 class, $500, was won by Cora, Harry Velox second. Time, 2:34½, 2:32¾, 2:33¾. The 2:27 race, $500, was won by Timothy, Argonaut second. Time, 2:34¾, 2:34, 2:28¾. On the 16th, in the pacing race, 2:20 class, $400, High Jack took the first heat in 2:27, and Billy Scott the next three in 2:30¾, 2:32¾, 2:34½. In the one-and-a-half-mile dash, $250, Keno was first and Jack of Trumps second. Time, 2:49¾. Owing to heavy rains the last day's races were postponed until 18, when the 2:30 race, $500, was won by Alleghany Boy (after ten heats were trotted) in 2:34, 2:37¼, 2:39¾. The 2:40 race, $500, was won by Harry Velox, J. F. Leonard second. Time, 2:47, 2:35¾, 2:39, 2:34¾, 2:36. The concluding event was the free-for-all race, $600, which was won by Moose, Driver second. Time, 2:27¾, 2:29½, 2:31¼.

WEST-SIDE DRIVING PARK.

Three races were held at this Jersey City track under the auspices of the newly-organized West side Driving Park Association June 16. Road horses belonging to members were engaged in the different events. The first, for a gold medal, mile heats, was won in two straight heats by Van Valkenburg's M. J. D. in 2:57, 2:53¾; S. Kelly's Jake second and G. A. Thompson's Dillie third. The next event was also for a gold medal, mile heats, and was captured by C. Davidson's Ned Jennings, winning the second and fourth heats, the first being taken by N. J. Campbell's Brokak, and the third by J. E. Jarvis' Kate. Time, 3:01, 2:58, 2:49¾, 2:53¾. A free-for-all sweepstakes, $300 and a gold medal, mile heats, was next, and was won by Jarvis' Happy Jack, who took the first and third heats, the second being won by J. Pake's Susie. Time, 2:45¾, 2:48¾, 2:42¾.

FOXHALL AND THE GRAND PRIZE.—A cablegram from London June 18 reads as follows: "The Paris correspondent of The Sportsman says: 'The report about an objection to Mr. Keene's Foxhall as winner of the Grand Prize of Paris is entirely untrue. The Messrs. Weatherby had all the requisite papers, including the veterinary certificate of Foxhall, although the French Jockey Club does not require that a certificate shall be lodged in Paris when entries are made abroad. Not only has no formal objection been made, but a remittance for the amount of the Grand Prize has been sent to the Messrs. Weatherby, to be added to Mr. Keene's account.'"

ARANZA, the three-year-old filly by Bonnie Scotland, recently purchased by Pierre Lorillard for $12,000, is stated to have been seriously injured about the head while being conveyed from the Rancocus stud-farm in New Jersey to the racecourse at Sheepshead Bay to train for the race at Monmouth Park July 7. It is feared that the injury may extend to the horse's brain.

MYSTIC PARK MEETING.

Few people were at Mystic Park, Boston, Mass., on Tuesday, June 14, the opening day of the June trotting meeting. This was largely due to rain, which fell in considerable quantities during the afternoon, making the track very muddy. The first race was for horses that had never trotted better than three minutes, $300, mile heats, three in five, in harness, and it was won in three straight heats by J. H. Nay's Portia, Nellie W. taking second money, J. H. Gould third, and Vladimir fourth. Time, 2:31¼, 2:33¾, 2:32¾. Horses of the 2:19 class next contended for a purse of $750, which was won in three straight heats by France's Alexander; Sheridan second and Bangor third in each heat. Time, 2:26¾, 2:26, 2:26¼. .....Over three thousand persons witnessed the races on the 15th. The first was between horses of the 2:34 class, twelve starting, for a divided purse of $300. In the race for 2:25 horses, $500, Weeks' Charley Champlin won in three straight heats; Mill Boy second, Lady Foxie third, and Robert Lee fourth. Time, 2:26, 2:25¼, 2:25¾.....Sport was resumed 16 with a contest between horses of the 2:29 class, $400, eight starting, and the winner being Dourrey's Olinda, who took three successive heats in 2:30¾, 2:27½, 2:28¾; Eve second, Tommy Norwood third, and Olive fourth. The next race was between horses belonging to the 2:22 class, $500, for which there were five starters. The winner was Weeks' Wizz, taking the second, fifth and sixth heats. The third and fourth heats and second money were won by Jersey Boy, and the first heat and third money by Steve Maxwell. The first race, for 2:45 horses, $300, was won by Bowers' Flirt, who took the third, fourth and fifth heats, J. H. Gould winning the second heat and money. Gen. Custer the first heat and third money, and the fourth prize going to George A. Time, 2:31¼, 2:32, 2:29¾, 2:31¾, 2:33. MEADOW BROOK POLO CLUB.

The members of this club held a race-meeting at Prospect Park parade grounds, Brooklyn, L. I., June 13. It was a private meeting, and there was a select company present. The first race, a three-furlong dash, for the Inauguration Stakes, a sweepstakes of $10 each, was won by Sancho (Aug. Belmont Jr. rider), a length before Pinto (F. O. Beach), who was three lengths ahead of Brick (H. L. Herbert). The Meadow Brook Grand National Steeplechase, weight for inches, $10 each, same course, followed, and was won by Fluke (F. O. Beach—160lb), by a half-dozen lengths from Fox (H. L. Herbert—150), who was half as far in front of Middy (W. C. Riggs—145). The Consolation Stakes, a handicap sweepstakes for beaten horses, $10 each, same course, was won by Dolphy (A. Ladenburg), a short head before Fox (H. L. Herbert), with Ginger (S. Mortimer) a bad third. The last event was the Prospect Park Handicap, a half mile, which was captured by Fluke (F. O. Beach—179), eight lengths ahead of Happy Jack (W. C. Riggs—150), Jet (A. Belmont Jr.—135) third.

RACING AT BELMONT PARK.—Gentlemen riders engaged in a series of races at Belmont Park, Philadelphia, June 13. There were few people present, and many horses that had been entered failed to appear. A quarter-mile dash, for horses that had not won this year, was won by Lounger (ridden by Meredith Norris), beating Conductor (Mr. Wilson) in 1:29¼. A half-mile-heat race followed, and was won by Townsend's Gale, beating Price's True Maid, in 57½sec. and 55½sec. Gale then defeated Mather's Hip Hip (Mr. St. James) in a mile-heat race, in 1:55¼, 1:57¼. A two-mile dash was next, and it was won with ease by Bennett (St. James) in 3:56½, defeating George IV (W. Huey). Meredith Norris subsequently purchased Bennett. A steeplechase, about two miles, wound up the day's sport, and it was won by Dr. Hudekaper's Pandora, outrunning M. Norris' Frank.

ST. LOUIS RACES.—The St. Louis Jockey Club brought their race meeting to an end on Tuesday, June 14, when the first race was three-quarters of a mile, and was won by Boatman in 1:20. A handicap for all ages, a mile and a furlong, was taken by King Nero in 1:56. This was followed by a mile-heat race, in which Boulevard came off "first best" in 1:46½, 1:46¼. The last race was won by Bagdad in 1:43¼.

THE MANCHESTER CUP was run for at Manchester, Eng., June 9, and was won by Captain Machell's Valor; J. D. Astley's Peter second and Seahorse third. Fernandez was the favorite in the betting. Valor, who was an outsider in the betting, was ridden by Fred Archer.

THE AMOUNT of money taken at the gate on the occasion of the recent race for the Grand Prize of Paris is stated to have reached nearly fifty thousand dollars, being considerably more than was ever before received for admission on one day at Longchamps.

O. J. DIMICK of Rock Island, Ill., has sold to H. C. Jacobs of Chicago his fine little trotter Peter Logan, sometimes called Peter Cooper. The price paid (eight suburban lots in Chicago) was about $2,400.

EDELWEISS, after winning the mile-and-an-eighth race from Vagrant and Blazes on the last day of the Jerome Park meeting, was sold to Mr. Howard for $1,005, and will go into George Sutcliffe's stables.

NEXT YEAR the St. Louis Jockey Club will institute a Derby stake for three-year-olds, the entrance to be $100 and the club adding $1,500 to make it more interesting still.

CAPTAIN COTTRILL of Mobile, Ala., has purchased from W. Lakeland of the same place the filly Minerette, four years old.

C. P. COYLE, formerly trainer for R. A. Alexander, died recently.

HINDOO, Crickmore and Aranza are among the entries for a new sweepstakes race for three-year-olds, $1,000 each, $2,000 added, half forfeit, Hindoo and Aranza to concede 5lb, a mile and a quarter, which is to be run at Monmouth Park July 7. Entries were to close June 21.

CONLEY vs. McKAY.

The four-mile scull-race between Conley and McKay took place at Halifax, N. S., June 17. A start was effected about half-past six. McKay getting away first and leading by a length, rowing thirty-six strokes to the minute, Conley thirty-four. These positions remained unchanged until the turn, where Conley caught up with his opponent and turned one length ahead, McKay having lost his advantage owing to the bad course he had been steering. However, he overhauled the Portlander in the first half mile of the homestretch, and passed him again, leading him by a length—a lead he maintained for the next mile, both men rowing hard. The struggle was too much for the Bluenose, and about half a mile from the finish Conley spurted splendidly, passing his man, and soon put two lengths of daylight between the boats. This lead he increased gradually, although McKay tried hard to close the gap. Conley crossed the line the winner by three lengths in 28m. 53s. The betting was not very lively, odds of 2 to 1 being offered on Conley without takers. L. A. Barnaby acted as referee. T. Garety represented McKay, and Aid T. Spellman represented Conley, also acting as timekeeper.

THE JAMAICA BOAT CLUB held a regatta June 17 on Jamaica Pond Boston, Mass., resulting as follows: Single sculls, about 1⅛ miles—H. R. Tarbell, first, in 13m. 53⅝s.; C. L. Hill, second, in 13m. 6s. Pair-oared working-boats, about a mile—Hyde and McKim, first, in 7m. 3s.; Tarbell and Hill, second, in 7m. 34s. The prize was a medal. Judges, E. W. Brewer and C. R. Pratt; referee, F. H. Richardson.

THE CHICAGO YACHT CLUB held a regatta June 18. Two boats competed in each of the four classes, and there was plenty of wind during the greater part of the day, with a hailstorm by way of variety. The winners in their respective classes were the Viking, beating the Countess of Dufferin; the Harry Burke, beating the Aerial; the Perl, beating the Zephyr; and the Fleetwing, beating the Wonder.

THE NEW BOAT-HOUSE of the Cohoes (N. Y.) Club was opened on the evening of June 15 with music, illuminations and a steamboat sail. It is located on the Hudson, adjoining the new Cohoes and Lansingburg Bridge, and is a neat two-story building, with piazza and balcony. The club is in a flourishing condition.

AT THE GAMES of the Irish-American A. C., held at the Centennial Grove, Boston, Mass., June 18, two boat races came off. The first, single-scull shells, was won by Silvie Gookin; H. O'Hearn second, Lynch third. A four-oared working-boat race was won by the St. Marie's crew; Enterprise second.

A REGATTA was sailed June 17 on Lake Quanapowitt, Wakefield, Mass., June 17, Capt. Wiley's boat winning the first prize; Commodore Richardson's the second, Captain Litchfield's third, and Captain Young's fourth.

BOSTON YACHT CLUB.

The annual open regatta of this club was sailed off City Point, Boston Harbor, Mass., June 16. Nearly seventy-five boats were entered in the half-dozen classes, but of this number only seventeen participated—a fact due to the presence of rather too much wind to suit the majority of the amateur sailors and yacht-owners. The race, however, was interesting, and quite exciting to those engaged, and, despite the strong wind and rough, choppy water, was unmarked by a single accident. The result is shown in the subjoined table, the distance sailed by the first and second class boats being twenty-three and sixteen miles respectively, and by the third class nine miles.

SEAWANAKA YACHT CLUB.

The eleventh Corinthian regatta held by this club was sailed June 18, under auspices of the most favorable kind, the weather being clear and warm, with a spanking breeze from northwest to send the smart craft along. There were thirteen starters, comprising the schooners Agnes, Madcap and Clytie, the first-class sloops Gracie and Mischief, second-class sloops Regina and Vixen, third-class sloops Wave and Schemer, and fourth-class sloops Gael, The Cute, Petrel and Coquette. These vessels were sailed by their captains or members of clubs to which the vessels belong, with amateur yachtsmen only constituting the crews. The course for schooners, first and second class sloops was from the anchorage off Fort Wadsworth, Staten Island, to and around Sandy-hook lightship and return, while the third-class turned Scotland lightship, and the fourth went around Buoy No. 5½, off the point of the Hook. The tide was the last quarter of the flood when the signal to go was given at 11:25 A. M., and the yachts went away swiftly before the strong breeze, which, meeting the incoming tide, had roughened the water considerably, and white caps were abundant. Shortly after starting the Gracie had the misfortune to lose her topmast, but the wreck was cleared away at once, and the boat held to her course, the Madcap taking the lead at starting, but inside of twenty minutes she was passed by the Agnes, and at noon the latter was in turn passed by the Mischief and Gracie in succession, the order and time of arrival at the Spit buoy being: Mischief, 12:23:45; Gracie, 12:24:28; Clytie, 12:25:19; Agnes, 12:26:06; Madcap, 12:33:10; Regina, 12:34:34; Vixen, 12:34:57; Schemer, 12:36:10; Wave, 12:38:16; Petrel, 12:46:08. The run to and past the point of the Hook was dead before the wind, and spinnakers and balloon sails were quickly set, and the boats dashed merrily through the foaming sea. The Clytie, under the pressure upon her great spread of canvas, outsailed the rest of the fleet, overhauling the Gracie and being second to the Mischief in rounding the home of weather-beaten Captain Cosgrove. Meanwhile the boats of the third class turned their outer mark, Scotland lightship, as follows: Schemer, 1:26:30; Wave, 1:28:52. Soon after rounding the former came very near being run down and sunk by the three-masted schooner B. I. Hazard of Port Jefferson, which caught the leach of the yacht's mainsail, tearing the sheet in twn and putting her out of a race which otherwise she stood an excellent chance of winning. The wind was fresh outside of the Hook, and all the vessels made good time to the lightship, which was turned as follows: Mischief, 1:37:38; Clytie, 1:39:11; Gracie, 1:39:36; Agnes, 1:44:15; Regina, 1:48:16; Vixen, 1:52:03. Balloons and other wind grabbers were lowered, and the Mischief housed her topmast, while topsails were generally clewed up, and everything made ready for the beat to windward. The Gracie gained upon the others, and when the point of the Hook was reached she had a long lead of the fleet, with her rival, the Mischief, second. No noticeable change in position occurred from this out, the Gracie, although losing something by standing too long to northward, making up for it after turning the Spit buoy, and increasing her lead all the way home, coming in at a rare pace far in advance of the others, and while the sun was yet high in the heavens. The appended table shows the starting, finishing, elapsed and corrected time of the vessels which were timed at the close:

The winners in their respective classes are the Clytie, Gracie, Regina, Wave and Petrel.

THE MEMBERS of the East River Yacht Club enjoyed their annual regatta June 20. The course was from the anchorage off the club-house at Pottery Beach to and around the Gangway buoy off Sands' Point, L. I., and return to Hunt's Dock. The starters comprised nine cabin-yachts, six open boats and three catrigged boats, divided into seven classes. The breeze was steady and strong, and the amateurs who had the working of the craft had all they could do. The winners in the several classes, with their corrected time, were as follow: First class, M. Charde's Favorita, 3.51:05; second, L. Kaier's Peerless, 3.55:01; third, J. F. Sullivan's Julia, 4.36:09; fourth, C. B. Elliott's Mistake, 3.36:02; fifth, J. Kreymeir's H. H. Holmes, 3.44:01; sixth, J. G. Northrop's Carrie Taylor, 4.01:50; seventh, P. H. O'Day's Fling Ugly, 4.46:32. The Holmes, having made the fastest elapsed time, she was awarded the club pennant. Judge Elliott was exceedingly elated over his success, and feels confident that his boat will do better next time.

YALE VS. HARVARD.—The Yalecians have held a meeting, at which the question of when the annual university race with Harvard should be rowed was considered. It was the sense of the meeting that precedent should be adhered to, and the contest be fixed for June 30, the day after Yale's commencement. A statement embodying half a dozen reasons why that date should be fixed was drawn up and forwarded to the Harvards. The latter had previously held a meeting, at which July 1 was insisted upon; and now Yale says that if the Crimsons will not agree to row the race June 30 they (Yale) will, out of courtesy to Columbia, and, in deference to Harvard's wishes, consent to row July 1, provided they will agree that during the next four years the contest shall take place on the day following commencement.

CORNELL AND THE VISITORS' CUP.—A cablegram dated June 17 reads as follows: "Mr. Gillig telegraphs from Henley on the Thames this afternoon that the stewards of the regatta have decided not to allow the entry of the Cornell University crew for the race for the Visitors' Cup." The Sportsman says: "The action of the stewards of the Henley regatta in declining the entry of the Cornell University crew for the race for the Visitors' Cup is perfectly inexplicable, save on the ground that this body has ever been notorious for meddling, mismanagement and lack of courtesy. We deeply regret that the Cornell four have received such treatment, and wish them to understand that the general public does not sympathize in the least with the eccentric perversity of the stewards."

A. T. POOLE of Rochester, N. Y., has projected another scheme, and he now offers a purse of three thousand dollars, to be divided into four prizes, and to be competed for in a professional scullers' race. He has invited all the leading oarsmen to enter, and it is stated that Hanlan, Trickett and Riley have already responded favorably, and it is expected that Ross, Smith, Hosmer, Morris, perhaps Courtney, and others will send in their names. After the result of the Providence race last year and the regatta on the Thames last Fall, it is not probable that any entries will be received from the other side of the ocean. The race will probably take place on Saratoga Lake.

THE DORCHESTER YACHT CLUB.—The annual regatta of this club was sailed off Nahant, Mass., June 18. All conditions were favorable, and there was quite a good-sized assemblage to witness the event. There were twenty-four contestants, divided into five classes, and the winners, with their actual sailing and their correct time, were as follow: First-class schooners—Caroline, actual 1.59:25; corrected, 1.42:29. Cutters and sloops—Enterprise, 1.58:26 and 1.35:17. Second-class sloops—Hero, 2.01:14 and 1.40:21; Shadow, 2.04:05 and 1.41:09. Third-class sloops and catboats—Thistle, 2.26:05 and 1.49:33; Emily, 2.21:48 and 1.51:48. Fourth-class sloops and catboats—Druid, 1.56:29 and 1.31:25; Psyche, 2.05:29 and 1.38:15.

THE RAY HOWLAND, a new yacht belonging to H. Garvinson of Yonkers, N. Y., was on June 18 tried against the sloop Scud, the crack boat of the Yonkers Yacht Club. The latter went off with the lead, which she held to the turning stakeboat, which she reached 2m. 30s. ahead. The Howland, which had been placed at a disadvantage by the splitting of her bowsprit near Dudley's Grove, two men being required to hold it, gained rapidly after rounding, and down to the Yonkers gas-house, about a half-mile from the finish, when a squall struck and capsized her, which mishap lost her the race. The crew of the overturned yacht were rescued by the ferryboat Armsmear.

NEWBURYPORT YACHT CLUB.—This Massachusetts club held a regatta June 17 on the Merrimac River. The course for the first two classes was eight miles, and for the third class six miles. The Dauntless won the first prize, a silver fruit-dish, in the first class; time, 1h. 42m. 17s. The first prize in the second class, a silver goblet, was won by the Clytie; time, 1h. 53m. 23s. The third-class race, prize, a silver cup, was won by the Keturah in 1h. 45m. 23s.

THREE RACES—one for boys under eighteen years who had never won a prize, four lengths of the bath; a handicap 440yds. race; and a swim against time by Prof. George Palmer—will take place June 27 at the swimming-bath foot of West Twentieth street, this city, at 5 P. M. Entrance-fee to handicap, 50 cents; boys' race free.

THE RACE between the crews of the Columbia Boat Club of Washington, D. C., took place June 18, and was won by Ziegler (bow), Smith, Williams, Lake (stroke), in 6m. 45s., defeating Wallace (bow), Olds, Henderson, Brace (stroke). The latter lost about two lengths in turning.

THE YONKERS (N. Y.) YACHT CLUB held a regatta on the Hudson June 20. There were three sloops, two first-class and five second-class catboats, and the course sailed over was twenty-five miles. Winners in their respective classes: Scud, Yankee Bird and Skip.

A FOUR-OARED lapstreak race took place at Halifax, N. S., June 14, between the Lavers-Huich crew of the North end and the Kennedy crew of the South end, resulting in a victory for the former by six lengths. Time, 22m. 30s. Distance, three miles.

THE HAVERHILL Y. C. sailed a regatta on the Merrimac River, Mass., distance five miles, June 17, with this result: First class—Twist and Emma L. took first and second prizes; second-class, Sophie.

THE PRIZES offered at the Richmond Regatta are as follow: For shell crews of visiting clubs, - silver cup valued at $100; for single-sculls, open to all, a cup worth $75.

THE REGATTA of the Quincy (Mass.) Yacht Club was held June 17 thirteen boats competing, and the winners in their respective classes being the Muriel, Glance and Dandelion.

THE Chester regatta was sailed on the Delaware, from Chester to Cherry Island buoy and return, June 20. The Minerva, Chas. Gallagher and Adelphia won in their respective classes.

MCKAY leaves Halifax for the Kennebeceasis on Monday, June 19, and will go in training for his race with Nagle. The date has been changed from July 2 to June 27.

WARREN SMITH has entered for the single-scull race in the regatta at Ottawa, Ont., July 1. He was to leave for that place June 20.

GEORGE ENGELHARDT is requested to send his address to J. H. C. Watts, Baltimore, Md., at once.

JOHN A. KENNEDY has gone to Washington to prepare the Potomac four for the Virginia regatta.

THERE is a letter in our care for Edward Trickett.

BASEBALL.

BOSTON vs. DETROIT.

The Bostons beat the Detroits June 14 at Boston, Mass., after having sustained four consecutive defeats at the hands of the Western club. A rainstorm just before the game commenced interfered with the attendance, and rendered the ground in a poor condition. Burdock laid off on account of a sprained ankle and Snyder did not play, and this caused several changes in the positions of the home-team. Whitney made his reappearance as pitcher and Deasley caught. Safe hits by Knight and Hanlon, a passed ball and a wild pitch gave the Detroits two runs at the outset. The Bostons made eight runs in the second and third innings on six safe hits, assisted by seven fielding errors. Costly errors by Richmond and Sutton enabled the Detroits to tie the score in the fifth inning, and again in the eighth. Richmond made the winning run for Boston in the tenth inning after two men were out, reaching first on a force-hit and being sent home by Houck's wild throw.

These clubs met again at Boston June 15, when the Detroits were treated to a decisive defeat. Fox pitched and Whitney played right field for the Bostons, while the Detroits laid off Wood and presented Leary in the pitcher's position. The visitors secured their only run in the first inning, Knight then getting his base on called balls, and being helped home on errors by Richmond and Deasley. Hornung by a splendid running catch and throw blanked the visitors in the second, when they had three men on the bases. The Bostons scored three runs in the fifth, on a base on called balls given Deasley, singles by Sutton and Whitney, and a two-bagger by Barnes. Derby then exchanged positions with Leary, but he was also hit hard, especially in the sixth and eighth innings, when six safe hits gave the Bostons four more runs. Barnes excelled in batting and fielding.

METROPOLITAN vs. NEW YORK.

The second of the championship series between these clubs was played on the Polo Grounds June 15, when the reorganized team of the New York club put in a first appearance. The team has been greatly strengthened by the addition of that fine player Treacy, he and Griffiths being graduates of the Manhattan College nine. The contest was close and interesting up to the seventh inning, when the Metropolitans made seven unearned runs. The score was:

The third contest between these clubs at the Polo Grounds June 16 gave promise in the opening inning of a close battle, the New-Yorkers leading, but after that a very weak right-fielder and bad throwing to second base by the catcher led to so demoralized a condition of things in the New York field that the Mets scored unearned runs each inning up to the seventh. The New-Yorkers had Poorman to help them. They have good players in McCann for first baseman and Tilly for left-fielder, an excellent change-catcher in McGlynn, and useful men in Dolan and Towart. Their only weak spot is right field, when Kelly is in form for catching, which he was not in this match. Foster did not have much chance to show his ability. They missed Treacy and Griffiths badly. The score tells the rest of the story.

The Atlantics tied the score in the third, Roseman reaching first on Householder's fumble, and Troy following with a clean home-run. In the sixth the Atlantics made the winning runs on successive safe hits by Roseman, Troy, Driscoll and Luff. Fulmer made a neat double-play in the eighth inning. Score:

JOHN C. ROWE.

We present this week the portrait of J. C. Rowe, one of the catchers of the Buffalo Club. He hails from Louisiana, Mo., and is twenty-five years of age. He commenced playing baseball in 1876, when he was connected with an amateur club of Jacksonville, Ill., but first found favorable notice while catching for the Milwaukees during the latter part of the following season. In 1878 he caught for the Peoria Reds, a semi-professional organization that on one occasion defeated the Bostons. He commenced catching in 1879 for the professional team of Rockford, Ill., and when that club disbanded, in July, he joined the Buffalo Club, with whom he has since played. In 1880 he caught in fifty-four championship games for the Bisons, and by his playing in several positions this season he has proved that he is a decided acquisition. He is a sure catch, a swift and accurate thrower, and faces pluckily the swiftest and wildest pitching. He also excels in batting, and, being an earnest and hard-working player, is one of the most useful men of the Buffalo team.

TROY vs. CLEVELAND.

The fifth game between the above-named clubs was played June 15 at Albany, N. Y., before about 1,000 people. The Troys substituted Keefe and Holbert for Welch and Ewing. Singles by McCormick and Glasscock, a two-bagger by Bradley and errors by Caskins and Hankinson yielded the Clevelands two runs in the second inning, and they added three more in the sixth on two hits. The other two runs credited to Cleveland were the result of wild throws by Hankinson. The Troys obtained their three runs on singles by Evans, Caskins and Keefe, a two-bagger by Ferguson, and errors by Phillips, Kennedy and Dunlap.

The Troys turned the tables on the Clevelands June 16, when they met in Troy, N. Y., before about six hundred people. Clapp caught and Purcell played left field for the Clevelands, Kennedy being laid off. The Troys presented Welch and Ewing, instead of Keefe and Holbert, in the respective positions of pitcher and catcher. The home-team bunched their hits in the sixth and ninth innings, when singles by Connor, Ewing and Ferguson and two-baggers by Gillespie and Evans earned three runs. The Clevelands made their only run on Glasscock's single and Phillips' two-baser. The fielding of both clubs was nearly perfect, all of the runs scored being earned.

CHICAGO vs. PROVIDENCE.

The fifth game between the above-named clubs was played June 15 at Providence, R. I., and was about the worst display ever witnessed on the local grounds. Goldsmith took Corcoran's place with the Chicagos, while Providence substituted Gilligan for Gross, and presented Ward as pitcher. The home-team got their only run in the first inning on a force-hit and wild throws by Goldsmith and Williamson. The Chicagos failed to bunch their hits until the seventh inning, when they pounded Ward for five singles and a two-baser, and scored seven runs, assisted by numerous fielding errors. The spectators, becoming incensed at the alleged partial decisions of Jeffers, acted in a disgraceful manner in the last two innings, during which Radbourn relieved Ward as pitcher. Four of the Chicagos went to first on called balls in the ninth inning, and with but one hit four more runs were scored and the game terminated.

These clubs met again at Providence, R. I., when the Chicagos won after an uninteresting and poorly-played contest. Corcoran took Goldsmith's place as pitcher of the Chicagos, while the home-nine were unchanged. A remarkable one-handed running catch by Gore was the only point worth mentioning.

WORCESTER vs. BUFFALO.

The Buffalos defeated the Worcesters June 15 at Worcester, Mass., although they were outbatted and outfielded by the home-team. Irwin was unable to play with the Worcesters, and Corey took his place at short-stop, accepting twelve out of thirteen chances offered. The Buffalos bunched their hits in the first and fifth innings, when eight safe hits, including two-baggers by O'Rourke and Galvin, let in four earned runs. The Worcesters got their first run in the sixth on Dorgan's single, a wild pitch and two outs, and earned two more in the seventh on singles by Creamer and Stovey and a two-bagger by Dickerson. The home-team batted Galvin freely, but their hits were scattered. The fielding of Corey and Force was the chief feature.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ QUESTIONS THAT DO NOT REACH THIS OFFICE UNTIL TUESDAY MORNING WILL NOT BE ANSWERED UNTIL THE FOLLOWING WEEK.

S. E. H., Perry.—If you have had experience on the stage, the better way would be to advertise for an engagement. If you have not had experience, it is almost useless to attempt to get an engagement in either of the ways you have named.

J. F. D., Philadelphia.—1. You seem to be uncertain as to the name, and we cannot aid you, in consequence. It is probable that if he is on the stage he has assumed a name. 2. There are a number of Macks and McNeils in the profession.

A. P., Boston.—1. Minnie Warren married Major Newell. 2. George Washington Morrison Nutt. 3. Major Newell is a dwarf, who married Minnie Warren. 4. See column of miscellaneous answers on an inside page.

A. J. F., Ford's Hotel, Richmond.—We do not furnish the addresses of professionals. You might direct a note to him in care of THE CLIPPER Post-office. We shall advertise it gratuitously, and he will probably send for it.

J. S. McM., Belleville.—We do not care for a regular there. Brief items, with routes ahead, sent so as to reach us by the first mail on Mondays will be thankfully received, and used if we have not later news.

D. S.—There is but one person who can answer that question, or give you the "when and where." That is Sid. C. France, who plays "Marked for Life." Address him.

GRACE.—Address A. L. Wilbur, Bijou Opera-house, this city. Perhaps he will not object to posting you as to his private affairs. Sign your proper name.

DAN, Brooklyn.—In the original cast of "The Two Orphans," at the Union-square Theatre, this city, McKee Rankin played Jacques.

T. D. H., Hanover.—We do not furnish the addresses of professionals, more especially females.

F. J. H., Pittsburg.—You win. There is in Chicago a theatre called the Halsted-street Opera-house.

A. D. M., Cincinnati.—See answer to "H. F., Washington."

FOOLING WITH TOM.—CHARACTER SONG.

WRITTEN AND COMPOSED FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Dedicated to SOL. SMITH RUSSELL by ALF. BURNETT. Set to Music by CHARLES CONNOLLY.

[Copyrighted, 1881, by FRANK QUEEN.]

Moderato.
1. As I was just walk-ing a-long down the street, A pret-ty, young
2. A sweet an-sw'ring "Yes, love!" was all she could give, "To-night I'll be la-dy I chanced soon to meet; She... glanced at me sweet-ly, and yours, and as long as we live I'll be true to my loved one wher-looked at me shy, I felt my heart throbbing, I scarce could tell why.
e'er he may be, In far dis-tant lands.. or roam-ing the sea."
By the light of her eyes, and her soul-pierc-ing glance, I..... felt my time
Quite soon we were wed, and we don't rue the day, And a-round us so come,.. and this was my chance; "Oh!.. dar-ling, my dar-ling!" I charm-ing our chil-dren do play. Now,.. all you young fel-lows, and has-tened to say, "Will you be my bride,.. and soon name the day?"
pret-ty girls too, Re-mem-ber what I have been say-ing to you.

Spoken after 1st Verse.—Yes, I wanted a direct answer; for I thought that she might possibly be only—— (Chorus.)

Spoken after 2d Verse.—Yes, married and settled. And often she says: "Tom, do you remember how you used to think I wasn't in earnest, and that I was only"—— (Chorus.)

CHORUS. 3d time ff.
Fooling with Tom, Fooling with Tom, Pleasant-ly trifling with in-no-cent Tom;
Pass-ing the day light-ly a way With a lit-tle flir-ta-tion while fooling with Tom.

3 So quickly get married, now don't you delay,
You know not what time may bring forth in a day;
And ask your mamma if I've not told the truth,
And taken example from Boaz and Ruth;
If a sweetheart you have, some dear little dove,
Quick speed to her side, and whisper your love;
Then on her sweet lips a tender kiss press,
And softly she'll murmur the magical "Yes!"

Spoken.—Yes, pop the delirious question at once: and you'll soon find whether she's really intending housekeeping, or only—— (Chorus.)

BILLY MARBLE, Buffalo.—The "old portrait of an English actor called Billy Marble" you have in your possession, "with the year 1835 marked on the back, although it looks much older," is probably not that of any actor whatsoever. We have never heard of any actor of that name who was prominent on the English stage. Probably it is the portrait of some quiet individual called William Marble, and, remembering that there was a famous comedian named Marble, perhaps someone has caused this piece of canvas to be handed down as the portrait of the comedian. But his name was Danforth Marble, and he was an American actor. The only other Marbles on the American stage are too young to have had adult portraits painted in 1835 or 1836. William Marble, a son of "Dan," is managing a dramatic company at the West.

C. F., Chicago.—Although called up by your alleged participation in an entertainment given a few days before in Chicago by or in behalf of the Elks of that city, yet that question did not directly concern you to which we replied that "we cannot enter into the private affairs of professionals." Our impression at the time was that it was a professional who had sent us the queries under the guise of a dispute between himself and a friend as to the identity of a lady. If so, he got but little satisfaction.

J. A. C.—1. Miss Venie Clancey is in retirement. 2. She has left the stage. 3. She married a non-professional. 4. Miss Lizzie Webster is also in retirement. 5. She, too, is married; but she did not wed a non-professional, exactly. 6. It is too early yet to say for a certainty with whom anybody will play next season. 7. Miss Mary Anderson first went on the stage in 1873. 8. It has been said that she was then but seventeen years of age.

A SUBSCRIBER, Philadelphia.—The likeliest place to find out is at the store of some prominent publishing firm in Philadelphia. We have searched our files as far back as the close of last March, and can find no such statement as that you say was made in this paper "a few weeks ago." Perhaps you have read it elsewhere.

F. J. AND C. R.—1. F. J. loses. The Miss Augusta he saw play Victorine in "The Seven Clerks" (as an old drama was then named) at "The Bandbox," in Houston street, this city, twenty-three or twenty-four years ago, with the Murdoch Dramatic Association, was Miss Augusta Dargon. 2. She is now in Australia, retired.

J. H., Belleville.—1. This query was substantially answered in this column last week, to "Tambo, St. Louis." 2. Were we to answer as you direct, no one but you would know what the question is about; and as a rule we cannot afford space for a question that will interest but one person.

C. T. Y.—Barnum's Museum, corner of Ann street and Broadway, this city, was burned July 13, 1865. The fire occurred in the midst of a broiling sun, and not at night. It was the upper Barnum's Museum that was burned at night.

G. W. G., Brockport.—1. T. W. Keene is not related to either Chas. or Edmund Kean, nor was Laura Keene a relative of his. 2. The mother of Edwin Booth is living yet. 3. The salaries of leading juveniles vary very much.

H. S.—The question cannot be definitely answered. The term "neat" involves a question of taste, and it would cost more to meet the taste of one person than of another. Consult some costumer as to materials and style, and he will give you an idea of the cost.

H. W. A., Cheyenne.—So long a time has elapsed that she has probably either retired for good or changed her name. Why not advertise for her, if the matter is important?

R. A., Dodge City.—We know of no one who teaches in either city. A small advertisement in our business pages would elicit the whereabouts of several teachers, no doubt.

E. H. D., Grand Forks.—You could scarcely get such a job. The Fall of the year is not a good time for circuses. There is nothing like trying, however, and you might advertise for a berth.

H. F., Washington.—Why not address him in care of THE CLIPPER Post-office? This department is not designed for the purpose of furnishing addresses or whereabouts.

K. P., Boston.—Your question was answered in this column last week, in response to "H. J., Waverly." The talk about turning triple somersaults is nonsense.

P. K., Metropolis.—1. See answers in column on an inside page. 2. We are not aware that any manager and his dramatic company have been arrested for bank-breaking in the South.

C. L. C.—Carl Anschutz, the musical-director, died in this city at the close of 1870.

READER, Philadelphia.—The Philadelphia Lodge of Elks was organized on March 12, 1871.

H. W. B., Cincinnati.—John E. Owens has frequently played a French character-part.

WINDSOR.—"The Two Orphans" is the property of A. M. Palmer of the Union-square Theatre, this city, and he grants rights to play it.

S. R. J.—You were answered last week in this column, page 205, same initials. Always look here for answers to amusement queries.

D. G. K., Chicago.—Not that we ever heard of, if you mean an elephant with four legs.

J. H., Gloucester.—Cooper & Bailey's Circus left San Francisco for Australia on Nov. 7, 1876.

READER, Hagerstown.—The salaries of programmers vary.

INTRODUCTORY.

TUESDAY, June 21, '81.

The city is quiet, and theatricals are almost at a standstill, but four or five houses continuing open and in operation. The dramatic agencies are doing a little business for managers, but the bulk of their engagements were made several weeks ago, when the tip-toppers of the stage were secured by the early birds of the managerial circle. Considerable time for next season has been filled, the haste displayed in making connections so early showing a lack of judgment and want of foresight as to probabilities and eventualities; for, after the schedules had been made out and signed, sealed and delivered, more important and advantageous opportunities offered, which the undersigned were unable to avail themselves of. Some, shrewder than others, held aloof and bided their time, and slipped into those vacant places where they could do the most good, at an advance on earlier current rates. A number rushed in recklessly and took everything that held out the slightest inducement for "closing the contract." There has been a good deal of throat-cutting going on among managers, and there will be still more before diplomatic negotiations are concluded and the stage is cleared for action. "The people"—that is, those players who are slowly climbing up the alleged ladder of fame—are not commanding high wages for next season's work, and any show of objection to the terms offered envelopes them in a cloud of uncertainty and stamps the hand of Nihilism upon their obdurate brows. On the other hand, prime actors and vocalists, who have gained a safe foothold in their ascent, and stand almost at the height where they may snatch the bubble reputation that shines dazzlingly upon them, can dictate terms, we are free to assert, to those managers who pride themselves upon giving their patrons the best talent that the market affords. Those who compose dramatic mobs and howling pirates and quarrelsome senators and fiends of hell and similar hazardous positions will remain just where they left off last season—their wages will rule at twenty-five to fifty cents per night, according to quality and the register of their voices; progressive supes—who compose the dividing line between the outer edge of supeism and the inner line of utility—will command a dollar per night, and find their own beer. Good leading supernumeraries, those who can assist the heavy man in tearing a passion into tatters, and who are fearless in seeking danger in the throat of death, are still held in high esteem, and are good for a dollar and a half per night, with slight indications of one or two free beers. Ballet-girls and dummies for village maidens and populaces command better rates than those with which parties of the male persuasion are rewarded. Front-rowers with "sculptured forms" and pretty faces are always in demand at special rates. To have an entire front row composed exclusively of handsome young girls with ravishing legs and arms, and forms of exquisite shapeliness and curvatures of algebraic correctness, is something to delight the eye of the entranced beholder, and of which any sane manager may well be proud. Fresh young things of unutterable loveliness are being developed each year, and these take the places of those whose once symmetrical legs now lag superfluous on the stage, and whose erstwhile rounded figures were wont to set the æsthetic spectator in a whirl of excitement terrible to behold. Dear, dear, how many of these bewilderingly beautiful dancing divinities have we seen rise and fall upon the mimic boards! O woman, woman, thy name is frailty! and thy weeping and sorrowing mother's is Mrs. Hollahan! (Jimmy, have you kept the run of this article, of its rise and progress, and ultimate destination? "I've tried to do it, but it's hard to keep up. You jump from one thing to another all of a sudden, just as if you'd followed the noble art of bounty-jumping in the last war." Is not the language perspicuous enough? "Oh, it's perspicuous enough, but I don't seem to get the hang of it, as it were. At one minute yer observin' of leading men's heads, and in the next yer givin' us a new version of girl's legs, etcetery. You don't stick to nothin'." Those points which interest the public most are what we aim to discuss and dissect and lay bare to the gaze of the lover of the drama and its exponents. "I fail to see it in those electric light, and I guess you would do well to jump the track and get into smoother places."].....We are never free from annoyance. If it isn't one thing, it's two or three other things, equally as distressing. To-day it's a holocaust in a theatre; to-morrow it's a dangerous tiger let loose in a moral circus crowded with wholly moral women and children; anon comes intelligence of the decease of a pet performing dog, etc. But these are as nothing when they are compared with that contretemps ["What's a contretemps?" You will see, later, James] which occurred in a theatre in Pueblo, Col., one night last week. Charlotte Thompson was a-playing Jane Eyre or something, and the curtain fell on that great scene where Charlotte falls into the open arms of Lord Rochester, you will understand. Now, what do you think those Pueblo people did at this crisis? Every blamed one in that intelligent audience, believing that the piece ended with her a-laying in his arms, got up and left the house as if it was a funeral procession they were a-joinin', and a sadder cavalcade or caravan you never beheld. But the saddest part is to come. The curtain remained down long enough for the strength of the company to procure a little refreshment; but when, at last, it uprose, the sight that met the eyes of Charlotte and the other players was one that struck them as if a constable had levied upon the furniture, and cleared the house—there was not a single soul in the auditorium except the man whose mission it is to look for lost opera-glasses and trade-dollars and jewelry. The house was as empty as a stewed-tripe lunch-tureen when the canvassmen of a circus pass through it. Do you wonder that we grieve at such ignorance? It is not for ourselves that we care, but for the mortification it caused Charlotte Thompson. .....Among those who will start out with flying colors next season is M. B. Leavitt, with his legion of gay-and-festives. And here we cannot resist the temptation to make a few soul-inspiring lines on an incident incidental to Mr. Leavitt's experience last year. Our friends are at liberty to read the poem or Leavitt alone.

REMINISCENT.

Oh, M. B. L., we wish you well,
And hope no fat's in the fire;
But that things so mixed last year may be fixed
'Twixt you and T. Maguire.
You've lots of pluck, and deserve good luck,
With a future much serener;
But you'd have saved many a Dollar o
If you hadn't have seen Selina.

..... The following conversation we overheard while on a visit to a circus:

He.—Do yer like lemonade, Sarah?

She.—No, I do not like lemonade; but I'm awful fond of candy.

He.—Does yer sister like lemonade?

She.—My sister likes lemonade, with pie.

He.—Would yer like a ginger-ale with yours?

She.—No; I will have some apple-pie and milk.

.....We will now show you with what ease we play upon words. It is an art that very few succeed in mastering, owing to its great difficulty. Please watch us closely, and let the applause be given whenever italics appear. Now, listen: An actor said chandelier instead of chanticleer. The manager was indignant. Said he: "Wait till I get the shanty clear, then shan't he clear? He shan't take Lear to-night, as he expected." Here the manager became chandelirious! It's easy—after you know how..... Constables and other officious meddlers out West will get hurt some of these days, if they persist in the vile practices which have recently marked their conduct. Because some unfortunate managers or players incurred indebtedness which they were unable to liquidate, and therefore had to get away hurriedly, these constables lay up such transactions against the unfortunates, and when the latter venture in the same direction with some other snap, so to speak, these bloodthirsty myrmidons fall upon them like thieves in the night, seize their wardrobes and other tools of trade, and the manager is compelled to settle or go bail before the wardrobe is restored and the show is permitted to go on. Several atrocious instances of this kind have recently occurred, whereby shows were crippled to such an extent as to "create fears of their recovery." Should this thing continue, some of our well-meaning but thoughtless professional friends will find themselves barred out everywhere, "fearing each bush an officer." If Western constables have nothing better to occupy their time than playing the spy on the movements of the poor player, nobody will envy them the fruits of their shameless labor! We would sooner pick strawberries than do anything so dreadfully mean as that....."Our Jim" was reading in the papers an account of an actor who had inadvertently committed an error of judgment which laid him open to a good deal of censure. The young man closed the reading as follows: "This was the most unfortunate fox pass of his life." Being told that faux pas was a French term, and should be pronounced fore paw, the lad responded that he "knew no Forepaugh but the circus-manager, and he should stick to his fox pass." We thought it useless to discuss the point, and so let the fox pass.....Another of our very own American vocalists has just made a successful debut as Mignon in London. She "hogged 'em," so to speak, and took the cake, as it were. Thus is another American triumph added to our fast-lengthening list of conquests. Her name is J-u-c-h—probably Juck; and, so presuming it to be, we materialize a few lines in honor of

OUR OWN ONE.

Americans everywhere now are in luck—
The latest great triumph was made by Miss Juck,
A new prima donna: we will greet her as such,
And hallow the name of Miss Emma Juck. [Juich.]
With rapture, her country will give her a push,
And seal the success of our own Emmie Juch. [Joosh.]
Nay, more; when the roses shall tint her fair cheek,
And we press the red lips of this fresh young Juck, [Jeek.]
Oh, then her we'll crown with the light hollyhock—
And brass bands sound the triumph of Miss Molly Juck. [Jock.]

.....Whenever we see a circus-actor playing with knives and plates and cannon-balls and blazing daggers, we grow dizzy, because we know that there is danger of his getting in the juggler vein [jugular vein]; but when he does something to make us laugh, our fears subside, for then we know he is in the jocular vein. [There are few persons other than ourself who can make so much out of so little, or so little out of so much, whichever you please.]

.....It is probable that next Fall, owing to his success in the part in London, Edwin Booth will try on Shakespeare and give us a bit of Othello, as he gave it with Irving. "Our Jim" fears that the worthy son of his father may not do it justice. He says, says he: "Othello was a cruel waiter, and one of the colored men who fought so bravely in our late war. He was as strong as an ox, and was champion deerslayer of the New York Athletic Club. There wasn't no man who could rastle with him for beer with any hope of success, and his success in a bout with the dog of Venus made him kingpin of the high-kickers. Now, here is where Eddie Booth will be short-handed. Had he been put to a boxing-school when he was in his pinafores, he would have made a scrouger, and Othello would not have stood much of a show in a set-to with him. To be sure, Othello was a trifle off color, yet so was one Molinux, who came near killing Tom Cribb, the Champion of England; but Othy aimed too high, and when he sat up at night with the old man's daughter, Desdemona, the youngest of the family, and she a white girl, his bigamous nature at once cropped out, and he made enemies of old whatdyercallem's family, bless yer. He knew no more about courting than a cow does of beeswax, and had to take a back seat when Edwin tost his cap into Desdy's domestic circle, which is his strong p'int, as you will understand; but Eddie isn't stalwart enough for such dreadful heavy business as that of crushing Desdy's life out of her with a three-ply bolster. Forrest was a peeler at this sort of business, and when he told the unhappy object of his unholy passion that she must die, she knew that the game was up. The late lamentable Frank Brower once said, when he played Othello:

"Desdemona, dar's no use er kickin',
For I'se gwan ter smudder you wid dis bed tickin'."

And just so it was when E. Forrest squelched her beneath his iron will and a big feather bed. I like Mister Booth as a man, but I like me country a dam sight better, if I may be so bold as to use such a profane and vulgar figger of speech. I don't lay much on Irving's Othello. He's too scraggy and pothecaryish. I think Eddie Booth lays over 'em tooth and toe-nail when larger is the play—that's where he's strong; he just makes trouble as natural as if he had been brung up to it all his born days, and didn't know nothin' else. But I must stop this disgressneas, and give me carm attention to me legitimit duties. This is me views about Othello and his actors. Wale!".....If you own a bear and an organ, and desire to operate them underneath the lattice of some Fifth-avenue palace or tavern, you can't do it. Why? Because the law's against you. But if you are a brass band, you can stay there and play just as long as you like. So if you are going into business for the Summer, don't buy any bears or organs, but hire as many bands as you like. This is a nice kind of a country for freemen and bears, isn't it?.....And, talking about menageries, we have no hesitation in declaring that flying rumors are far more destructive to mankind than are flying-horses....A man of progressive views asks our opinion as to the chances of success of a real rink with real ice in Summer. We froze him dead when we told him about the failure of last year's ice crop, and the great expense attending its importation from Alaska. So we are not likely to have real skating on real ice this season, and Peck & Snyder will miss the sale of many pairs of real skates.....Any religious man who may happen to own a walrus who will wrestle with the best of our professional wrestlers, can get a good price for the same, and no questions a kid as to whether it was lost or stolen.....We are told that after singing at her concert in Madrid, recently, Emma Thursby was invited to a private interview with the Queen at her palace. Now, what we want to know is what the Queen had to say at the interview, and how she acted, etc. Emma Thursby, of course, must have taken notes of the conversation, and it is due to us that she should give us an account of all that occurred at that remarkable meeting. We feel that we have a right to this; and Emma owes it to us to disclose all that was there said and done. We are a little curious in such matters, and we insist on learning the result of the conference.

CITY SUMMARY.

AN ITALIAN THEATRE.—Signor Vercelli has nearly completed a little theatre back of the Hotel di Roma, in East Forty-second street, between Third and Fourth avenues. It is about 62 feet deep by 54 wide, and is divided into a parquet and gallery, and has four private boxes. It is the intention to give plays in the Italian language two or three times a week, with the following prices: Parquet, 50 cents; gallery, 25 cents. The dramatic artists will be furnished by the Societa Filodrammatica Italiana Tommaso Salvini. Many of the best-known Italians are interested in its welfare. Should the enterprise prove successful, an Italian company will be imported.

JAMES O. BARROWS of San Francisco, Cal., is said to be engaged at the Union-square Theatre for next season.

MISS ALICE TOWNSEND will be a member of the opera company at the Bijou Opera-house next season.

THE STANDARD THEATRE closed after the performances of June 14, when Charles Brown retired from its management.

PRICES REDUCED.—For the Summer season only, the charges at Niblo's Garden are to be: Reserved seats, 75 cents and 50 cents; admission, 50 cents and 25 cents. A reserved seat on lower floor can be secured two weeks in advance for 50 cents.

THEATRE EXITS.—The Fire Commissioners on June 16 in general orders promulgated a copy of an act passed by the Legislature May 13, 1881, "relative to exits from theatres in the city of New York." The main points of the act are that managers "shall cause each and every door and means of exit to be used in case of fire or panic to be conspicuously numbered so as to be visible to the audience;" also that they "shall have or cause to be printed in conspicuous type a plan or diagram, and explanations showing each of said exits," and that such diagram shall be printed on the house-programme or bill of the play. The penalty for a violation of the act is $50, "to be sued for and recovered in the same manner as violations of the building laws in the city of New York are now sued for and recovered by the Fire Department in the city of New York." The following instructions were issued to all members of the force and officers of the Bureau of Buildings:

The Bureau of Inspection of Buildings is hereby charged with the execution of the requirements of the above law, and the members of the uniformed force detailed for duty in theatres shall, at the time of going on duty, examine the programme or bill of the play, and if the same does not contain the required plans or diagrams as approved by the Inspector of Buildings, or if any other violation of the law or non-compliance with its requirements be found, the same shall be immediately reported in the same manner as is prescribed in the case of other violations in General Orders, No. 13, O. B. C. series of 1880, a copy of the programme or bill of the play, if the same be found defective, to accompany the report.

THE ENTERTAINMENT given this week at Harry Miner's Theatre is an attractive one. An entirely new company appeared June 20, including the Delmannings—Archie and Den—in Ethiopian songs-and-dances; Alfred Klein in motto-songs; Mills and Warren in their German duets and witticisms; Ada Forrest in serio-comic songs; Carroll and Walters in a musical act, introducing solos and duets upon a variety of instruments; Minnie Hall in imitations of J. K. Emmet, with songs and guitar-solos; the Carrolls—Richard M., Edwin H. and Master Richard—in song-and-dance "My Father Sold Charcoal" and in a clog-dance in harlequin costume; Cora Cardigan in flute solos; the Colored Troubadours—Mme. J. M. Zara, W. A. Fernandez and Miss C. C. Thomas—in trio songs; Irene Santella in skipping-rope dances; the De Bar Brothers—Charles and William—in feats of contortion; and the Four Comets—Hawley, Manning, Williams and Hague—in songs-and-dances. The concluding sketch, "A Tailor's Luck," introduced A. H. Sheldon in the leading comic character. It will suffice to add that the above-named contributors to the programme were received with well-deserved applause.

HARRY AND JOHN KERNELL'S COMBINATION opened at Dick Parker's American Theatre on Monday night, when the lengthy programme embraced the Kernells in their droll Irish eccentricities, Minnie Farrell in character changes, Dave Reed in song-and dances, Hines and Blossom as "The Political Coons," Sailor West in his descriptive dances, Larry Tooley in Dutch songs, Arthur and Virgie Johnson in the sketch entitled "All of It," and the Laporte Sisters—Rose and Lillie—in duets. The above-named specialties happily displayed their respective powers of pleasing and amusing to a good attendance.

"DAN MALONEY'S RUFFLE" is in its third week at the London Theatre, and it continues to please the large audiences that assemble, judging from the applause and laughter bestowed. All of the characters are creditably illustrated, and no opportunities for the introduction of new features and local hits have been allowed to escape. In the opening olio Maggie Weston appears with her usual success in male impersonations; Hugh ey Dougherty provokes much mirth, and is warmly welcomed in his inimitable burlesque discourse; and Emma Hoffman's vocal efforts meet with a due share of applause. These were the only fresh features June 20.

MURPHY AND MORTON will be in the city next week, completing arrangements for a company that they are organizing to play at watering-places, and which will open at Atlantic City, N. J., July 11.

MANAGER R. E. J. MILES of Cincinnati, O., is in town.

JAY RIAL'S "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Combination began an engagement at Niblo's Garden on June 20, attracting an audience good for any time of year, and large for this season. Quite a number of colored spectators were visible in the upper regions. The now historical play was well performed, upon the whole; but there were several waits, for which the orchestra were unprepared, and their short repertory had in consequence to be repeated. It was 11.35 before the final curtain fell. Familiarity with handling the scenery should enable the sets to be made so as to shorten this time by at least half an hour.

THE MANHATTAN OPERA-HOUSE, Eighth avenue and Fifty-fourth street, opens June 27 with the May Roberts Combination in "The Two Orphans."

THE BIJOU OPERA-HOUSE, having no opposition in the comic-opera line, is doing a good business with "The Mascot," which is now in its eighth week.

THE AUDITORIUM of the Madison-square Theatre was well filled on Monday night last to see "The Professor."

JOHN PENDY, while performing in a theatre on the Bowery June 16, had his wardrobe, including change dresses, stolen.

G. B. CASTELLO of Shelby, Pullman & Hamilton's Circus arrived June 21. He reports their business in Canada as being large.

THE EXCELLENT BUSINESS done at Haverly's Fourteenth-street Theatre with "Sam'l of Posen" would seem to indicate that the theatre may be kept open all Summer, unless the weather should become excessively warm. A large audience was present June 20.

SAMUEL E. WETHERILL, recently arrived from San Francisco, Cal., called at THE CLIPPER office June 21. For twenty-five years past he has been closely identified with theatrical affairs on the Pacific coast, and he now proposes to locate in this city or to devote his time to the management of some combination.

SIMMONDS & BROWN since our last issue have engaged the following artists: Barton Hill, for Fanny Davenport; Will Sands, Laura Le Claire and Lizzie May Ulmer, for Maggie Mitchell; Leo Cooper, Virginia Fairfax, Delos King and Mary Hill, for Galveston; Jessie Hines, for "Sam'l of Posen;" Annie Wood, for Sol Smith Russell; W. J. Coggswell, John Daily, W. H. Young, T. J. Jackson, Charlotte Cobb and Josie Wilmore, for Mr. and Mrs. George Knight; Lillie Eldridge, Frank Budworth and L. Eddinger, for "One Hundred Wives;" Jeffreys Lewis, for "Two Nights in Rome;" Davenport Bebus, for the Madison-square Theatre.

JOHN W. NORTON and Roland Reed arrived June 20.

DRAMATIC.

J. G. STUTTZ' STAR COMPANY, which began a Summer season in Eureka Springs, Ark., dedicating the Opera-house June 6, include the Misses E. Alma Stuttz, Nellie Sabini, Helen Mt. Vernon, Myra Arlington, Messrs. J. G. Stuttz, J. E. Stuttz, C. Toler Wolfe, H. W. Barlow, Chas. Larkins, Mark Grayson and Dick Galvin. G. W. Pratt is the manager, J. E. Stuttz business-manager, and G. W. Gill advance-agent.

ISADORE DAVIDSON'S address is given in his card elsewhere.

MR. AND MRS. GEO. S. KNIGHT will make Bronson Howard's play "Baron Rudolph" the chief feature of their coming season. They travel under the management of Fred. G. and B. G. Berger. See address in another column.

THE EXCELSIOR COMEDY COMPANY closed a week's engagement in Belleville, Ont., June 11. Owing to the illness of Mr. Beresford's wife, the company disbanded there and went to New York.

BELLA WALLACE, first old-women, character and responsible business, whose address find in another column, can be engaged.

FOR KENDALL'S DRAMATIC COMPANY a number of performers are wanted. A violinist is also included in the list given in Manager Geo. Kendall's card. The season opens Sept. 1.

MANAGER CHAS. FORBES, whose address find in another column, wants a violinist and a cornet-player for next season, both soloists; also a little girl for dramas and specialities. He has engaged Ed. Gardner and wife and Paul Haaland for a seventh season with him, and Theo. Dana for a fourth season.

"ROOMS FOR RENT," the farcical comedy by H. L. Ensign and Edouard Holst, will be produced at the Bijou Opera-house, this city, Aug. 15, for a season of three weeks. The play is said to be particularly bright and sparkling, dealing with the curious characters reflected in life in a great city. W. H. Fitzgerald, Clarence Gibson, William Herbert, Edouard Holst, Fannie McNeil and Miss Reynolds have been engaged. Robert Spiller, who manages the company, informs us he is also in negotiation for W. J. Ferguson. Elsewhere Mr. Spiller publishes an emphatic card of warning to all who intend pirating this copyrighted production. Dates are now being arranged for a traveling tour.

A NEW THEATRE.—Messrs. Nindisch, Muhlhauser & Brother, wealthy brewers of Cincinnati, are about to erect a new opera-house in that city, on the northwest corner of Court and Vine streets, or nearly opposite the Vine-street Opera house. It will be designed principally for the benefit of the German company and the amateurs.

T. J. HAWKINS, late assistant treasurer of Pike's, Cincinnati, joins the Palmer-Graham Company next season.

A POOR BENEFIT.—D. B. Hughes, scenic-artist of Heuck's Opera-house, Cincinnati, benefited there June 16, the receipts being nearly $200 less than expenses. The attraction was a play in German by the Wurster Company.

THE WESTERN THEATRE COMPANY are billed in Colchester, Ill., July 8, 9, 11, Prairie City 12, 13.

"YANKEE" ROBINSON has been engaged for the period of three years by Charles Forbes.

NORA HIGERSON of Milwaukee, Wis., has contracted to play for eight weeks in California with Gus Bruno's "Voyagers."

"THE NAIAD QUEEN" at Pence's Opera-house, Minneapolis, Minn., continued to attract good houses until June 18, when the season closed. The company contemplated a week's tour through Wisconsin, commencing 20.

MISS PHOSA MCALLISTER has leased Pence's Opera-house, Minneapolis, Minn., for next season, and will open it Sept. 1.

AT THE CHESTNUT-STREET OPERA-HOUSE, Philadelphia, Pa., the complete list of attractions to be presented by Manager George K. Goodwin during the season of 1881-2 is as under: Emma Abbott's Opera Company (two engagements), Mary Anderson, Rossi, the Boston Ideal Opera Company, Janauschek, Bartley Campbell's "Galley Slave," Rice's Surprise Party (two engagements), J. W. Collier's "Coney Island" Combination, Augustin Daly's "Cinderella at School," Mahn's Opera Company, Lotta, Aldrich & Parsloe's "My Partner," J. K. Emmet (two engagements), Robson and Crane, "Hazel Kirke," Comley & Barton's Opera Troupe, Collier's "Banker's Daughter," Kiralfys' Spectacular Combination, and Robert Spiller's new play "After the Opera."

RACHEL NOAH and Henry Morrison (treasurer) had a fair-sized audience at their joint benefit at the Boston (Mass.) Theatre June 17. The selections comprised "My Uncle's Will," performed by George R. Parks, S. E. Springer and Miss Noah; the fourth act of "The Marble Heart," Barton Hill playing Raphael; Louis Aldrich, Volage; Mrs. Thomas Barry, Mlle. Marco; Mr. Parks, Veaudore; Arthur Moulton, Frederick; Clara Flagg, Clementine; and May Whitney, Fedora; recitations by Florine Arnold and A. Z. Chipman; a song by Master Harry Hamblin; a scene from "The Hunchback," Josephine Cameron of California making her Boston debut as Julia, Barton Hill being the Master Walter and Mr. Parks Sir Thomas Clifford; and the melodrama "Jack Sheppard," Miss Noah playing Jack, supported by A. W. Purcell, T. H. Burns, H. E. Plumb, E. Y. Backus, Parks, Springer and Moulton, Mrs. W. L. Ayling and Geraldine Ulmar, who made her dramatic debut as Winnifred Wood. Miss Noah has been re-engaged for next season, and it is certain William Redmond has been secured as leading man. Eugene Tompkins is to return from Europe by July 1, when C. S. Getz, scenic-artist, will commence his labors. "Michael Strogoff" will have an early production.

GEORGE H. TYLER, acting-manager and treasurer of the Park Theatre, Boston, Mass., had a substantial benefit June 15, the audience being one of the largest ever inside the house. The bill as reported in our past issue was not carried out in its entirety, the illness in New York of Sara Jewett causing the omission of the screen-scene from "The School for Scandal," and the indisposition of W. H. Fessenden, the tenor, obliging him to be absent, his place on the programme being filled by Joseph L. White, who sang "I Stood on the Bridge at Midnight." An address in rhyme, especially written by Nat Childs, and spoken by Little Florence Bryant, in a similar costume to that of the page seen on the act-drop, was one of the features not before mentioned. Otherwise the announced programme was given in its integrity. With this performance the season ended.

CHARLES L. DAVIS has returned after a forty-two weeks' season overbrimming with enthusiasm at the success that has attended the "Alvin Joslin" Comedy Company. We are afraid to name the figure that is given as the clear profit; but it is a big one, and we certainly can substantiate his statement as to the tour being an exceedingly prosperous one, from the numerous favorable reports from our correspondents, all running in the same vein of praise for the performance, and putting crowded houses as a deserved mark of approval and profit for the star and his clever company. The fourth season opens Aug. 29, and "Alvin Joslin" will command, without doubt, as much attention in the principal cities South and West to the Pacific Coast as this well-known characterization has received elsewhere. Mr. Davis states that during election, Lent, the stormy season and against big opposition, notably against Barnum's Circus, he has had the same phenomenal success with his play; and in Canada likewise, notwithstanding the towns had been overdone with amusements, he managed to add largely to his bank account and reputation. He is a great believer in printer's ink, and he has given full evidence of it by the extensive billing with which he has made each town he has played in fully aware that "Alvin Joslin" was most decidedly around and awake. For next season he has one hundred new lithographs, all in colors, and a stand of bills, four hundred and ten sheets, in five colors, among his advertising features. His time is now filled for sixty weeks, and he is energetically pushing forward all the preliminaries for the opening of the coming season, which he looks forward to with the most sanguine anticipations. There is one point that he puts forward strongly—that is, that he does not care to play on shares, but prefers to rent everywhere, taking the risk, but, as it has proved in his case, also taking the profit. The "Alvin Joslin" Comedy Company we can certainly put down, from the information we can command, as one among the exceptionally successful traveling troupes during the past season. An advertisement gives further information.

GEORGE DUNBAR, an acrobat and gymnast now performing with W. W. Cole's Circus in California, writes to THE CLIPPER: "In recording the death of Theodore Dunbar, a short time ago, it was stated that deceased had been connected with Cole's Circus as gymnast and acrobat. This is incorrect, as I am the only person by the name of Dunbar ever connected with that circus. I desire you to make this statement that my name may not be confounded with that of the deceased."

ROBBINS & COLVIN'S CIRCUS exhibited in Rochester, Mich., June 16, Port Huron 17, Romeo 18, Owosso 20, St. Johns 21, Ionnia 22; thence to Grand Rapids 23, Grand Haven 24.

THE CALIFORNIA CIRCUS collapsed during the past week in Wisconsin. A correspondent writes: "Al. W. Davis, the proprietor, 'jumped' the show, leaving company destitute."

LEOTARD CARLO, a youth of twelve, was before Judge Parmenter of the Juvenile Court in Boston, Mass., June 18, for stealing a can of milk. Our correspondent says: "The cause of his trouble was having his coat stolen while bathing in a public bath-house, and, not caring to return home without his garment, wandered around the streets till hunger compelled him to steal. The lad was taken in charge by one of the court officers, and his case continued till 21. His father, now dead, was an acrobat, and one of the Carlo Family connected with Barnum's Circus during the season of 1875-76, and his mother is an actress, at present engaged at Forest Garden, Boston. The boy is an expert gymnast and equestrian, and has appeared with his father's and other circus companies in this country, the West Indies and South America."

A CIRCUS known as the Great London Show (?), according to a telegram dated Chicago, June 20, was seized in Des Plaines, Ill., by a Deputy-sheriff from Chicago, on a writ of attachment in a suit of Thomas Hayden vs. George W. De Haven and Lyman Lulyen, proprietors of the show, for $800. The circus-tents, horses, etc., were taken to Chicago.

Business continues large, and the press of all sections visited endorse the merits of the show, as will be seen by the appended extracts:

BATCHELLER & DORIS' CIRCUS.—The Batcheller & Doris Circus visited our city for the second time on yesterday, and played to perhaps the largest business that was ever done here by a circus. Everything, from the parade to the last act in the ring, was first-class—in fact, surpassed all expectation. We can certainly recommend this establishment as worthy of patronage, as they exhibit everything advertised, including the Egyptian Novalapus, which is certainly a great curiosity.—William port (Pa.) Gazette and Bulletin, June 16.

Batcheller & Doris' pavilions yesterday were perfectly jammed with people. It was the most extensively advertised show that ever exhibited here, and consequently drew the people. Their street parade was excellent, the menagerie varied and extensive, containing many novelties, while their ring performance was of the highest order of merit. We never before saw such a thoroughly pleased audience, and the managers deserve all the praise we can bestow upon their show. They deserve all the success attainable.—Williamsport Banner, June 16.

The circus and menagerie of Batcheller & Doris arrived early Thursday morning, and created such a furor that all schools and factories were closed to give the scholars and employes an opportunity to witness the parade and attend the performances. They played to overflowing houses and delighted audiences, giving the utmost satisfaction. We hope they may favor us with another visit before the season ends.—Intelligencer, Danville, Pa., June 18.

BATCHELLER & DORIS' SHOW.—As usual, a large crowd visited the circus on Wednesday. The circus is a good one. Mr. Patterson, as the Irish clown, is the best that has visited this city for some time. His jokes were new, and elicited frequent applause from the lovers of fools' sayings. The performance in general was good, and gave universal satisfact on. One noticeable feature was that all the men connected with the show were gentlemen. The usbe's were models of politeness, while the usual peanut bore was not a "rough." The Batcheller & Doris Show is only three years old, and is a large child for its age; and we think the managers can congratulate themselves on the success which has attended them thus far this season.—The Breakfast Table, Williamsport, Pa., June 19.

GEORGE CLARK, ALIAS JASPER, a negro attached to John H. Murray's Circus, during the past week stole $51 from the treasurer, Robert Brado, while in a sleeping-car of the Boston and Albany Railroad. MISCELLANEOUS.

In Memory of Mrs. Ira A. Paine,

WHO DIED JUNE 13, 1881.

For her who's passed to a bright land
We'll shed the kindly tear;
Her work in life was nobly done,
While she was with us here.

Her deeds of good were simply worked,
Without a thought of fame;
Yet many friends, both rich and poor,
Will long revere her name.

God thought 'twas best to call her home,
And sent his angels down
To bear her upwards to the sky,
In heaven to wear a crown.

So softly did they speak to her,
In silence of the night,
That scarce we knew her spirit fled
Before the morning-light.

Though dark the grave wherein she's laid,
And cold to us do it seem,
It opens into portals bright,
Where peace reigns all supreme.

Let us not murmur at our lot—
Our Father's ways are best—
For safe within his tender arms
Our loved one is at rest.

FOREIGN DRAMA.

"Le Pretre."

a drama in five acts, by Charles Buet, a rising young journalist and novelist, was recently produced at the Porte St. Martin, Paris, and met with success. The curtain rises on the residence of the Marquis of Champlaurent, in Brittany. The Lord of the Manor has been ruined in a series of speculations into which he had been led by an adventurous friend, Olivier Robert, who does all he can to persuade him to continue his operations. The Marquis refuses to tempt Fortune further. He has sold a farm and a wood, and has realized a capital of 200,000f., on the interest of which he proposes to live and bring up his two sons, Georges and Patrice. The sight of the large sum incites Robert to commit a crime. One night he creeps into the house, wearing the wooden shoes and blouse of an unfortunate drunken peasant, from whom he had taken them while he lay unconscious, makes his way to the Marquis' bedroom, and robs and kills him. His victim expires with the word "Robert!" "Robert!" on his lips, but the Marquise and the servants believe that he only meant in his last moments to call on his closest friend to look after his widow and children. This terrible mistake becomes the foundation of the drama. Two months have elapsed between the first and the second scene, which takes place in the garden of the manor. The household is in a state of sad emotion, for on that day justice has been executed on the peasant against whom such strong circumstantial evidence existed. Robert, the real murderer, is there, and the Marquise, who has never ceased to regard him as her dead husband's old and faithful friend, offers to be a mother to his daughter during his absence, for the wretch is going to seek fortune in British India. She explains to him at the same time her projects for the future of her sons; both are to be soldiers, one of his country, and the other of the faith. The action is transferred to India, and thus affords an opportunity for the introduction of spectacular displays of the "Around the World" order, which, however, weaken the piece. The first of these scenes was tiresome, but it contained the great sensation of the piece, namely, the appearance of Patrice De Champlaurent, in the holy garb which he has assumed in obedience to his mother's vow. The scene is that of the plantation or factory belonging to Olivier Robert. The murderer had flattered himself that he would never again set eyes on a face which should recall that of his victim; but by abandoning his daughter Gilberte to the care of the Marquise during two years in Brittany he had, as it were, gone to meet his destiny. Gilberte has returned to her father after the death of the widow, and Georges De Champlaurent, the younger of the brothers, who is now an officer in the French Navy, who has been brought up with her, who loves and is loved by her, has not been slow to follow her. Robert has no choice but to receive and welcome him; he even gives his consent to the betrothal of the young people. Then appears the other brother, Patrice, who is the living image of his father. The appearance of the priest is awaited by Robert with anguish, and by the audience with curiosity. The priest's arrival seems to have brought ill-luck to the murderer; for the Indian outbreak begins, Robert's plantation is seized by the natives, and we have a grand spectacular scene interpolated, representing the entry of the Rajah Rac-Sangor-Sing, surrounded by a brilliant suit. Robert's factory is set in flames, and Georges succeeds in leading Gilberte, his fiancee, to the house of a Parsee, who had offered hospitality to her father in case any catastrophe should ever befall him. This seeming generous fidelity is a mere wile. Algoe Mahal allows the French officer to leave, but he shuts up his young mistress in a narrow prison, dooming her to death by starvation. When the Abbe Patrice comes to ask help and shelter from him, the wretch offers him poisoned water, but as the priest is about to drink it two shrieks are heard to stay him. One proceeds from the house, from Gilberte; the other from without. The Parsee's child has been bitten by a serpent, and its mother rushes on in a state of frenzy. The Abbe saves the little fellow by sucking the hideous wound. The Parsee, overcome by gratitude, restores Gilberte to the brother of her betrothed, and she and Georges are able to make their way to the coast and take passage on board an English ship. Olivier Robert has sought refuge in a British fort, which, however, is soon to be carried by the Hindoos. Here occurs the striking situation of the drama. Robert is confined in a tower of Sangor-Sing's palace; he has taken down a poniard from a rack of arms, and is striving to force open the door, when it swings back on its hinges, and he finds himself once more face to face with the priest, who is pushed through it and shut up with the murderer. The Abbe had come to save him by the offer of a ransom which had been refused, and he now exhorts his companion to prepare for his impending fate by making his peace with God. Robert is rendered frantic by such a proposal from the son of his victim, and, while the priest calmly endeavors to fulfill his holy mission, the murderer, who has no belief in religion, bursts into a fury of passion, blasphemes against his Maker, insults and mocks the Abbe's gown, and, at last, in his fury, undertakes to urge the pure-minded minister of the gospel on the path of passion and crime. Reviving the terrible memories of the priest's youth, he draws a picture of the Marquis' death, and, at last, in the climax of his paroxysm, actually declares himself the murderer. "My father," replies the Abbe, "has been avenged by human justice; the wretch who struck him has expiated his crime." "You are mistaken," retorts Robert; "the murderer lives, and it was his name the dying man uttered with his latest breath!" The priest becomes suddenly transformed by this cynical avowal; his sacred character he forgets, and, remembering only that he is a son, he springs at the danger with which Robert had been attempting to make good his escape, seizes it, and has raised it to strike the wretch, when he lets it fall from his hand and bursts into tears. At that moment Sangor-Sing enters. He divines at a glance that a terrible scene has just taken place between the two men, and reads in their eyes a mutual mortal hatred. Seeing an opportunity of making an experiment on a Christian mind, he seizes it, saying to Robert: "One chance of saving your life is still left you. Approach this priest and look him in the face; if he raises a finger or speaks a word in sign of forgiveness, I shall spare you." The Abbe rises; he wishes to pronounce the word, but his lips refuse to utter it; it sticks in his throat. Robert's audacity has vanished as well; he advances a step towards Patrice, but then recoils, hiding his face in his hands, and is then led off by the Rajah's orders. In this critical moment the Abbe's mind is racked by tortures, but his hesitation at last ends; the pardon which, in his sacred character, he was bound to extend, even to his father's murderer, he feels it is his duty to accord, and, as he rushes to call it out from the window overlooking the courtyard in which Robert is about to be shot, the rattle of musketry is heard—he is too late. With this tremendous scene the drama may be said to have ended, and what follows is mere anti-climax; but the author had no option, as he was compelled to dispose of Georges and Gilberte before the fall of the curtain. We are brought back to Europe, and there find the Abbe Patrice not only suffering under bitter remorse, but with his mind torn by cruel doubts as to whether he should allow his brother's marriage to proceed. He cannot separate Georges from the daughter of his father's murderer without revealing the terrible secret which he alone knows. He asks himself whether it was in his priestly capacity or merely as a man that he received Robert's avowal; and to this first scruple is added another more human one, for he feels convinced that if he tells the truth neither Georges nor Gilberte will survive it. Charity turns the beam, and he signs the marriage contract.

DION BOUCICAULT'S BROTHER WILLIAM died suddenly June 16 in a railway carriage, near London, Eng. The coroner's inquest showed that he died of a heart complaint, aggravated by hurrying to catch the railway train. Deceased was the eldest of three brothers, Dion being the youngest. William and George while young went to Australia and founded The Melbourne Argus, which they worked into a valuable property. Some years ago they returned to England with handsome fortunes. William has, it is said, since his return, suffered from mental derangement, which incapacitated him from re-engaging in business.

HARRY JACKSON, stage-manager of the Princess' Theatre, London, on the occasion of his benefit, May 28, was presented with a set of silver.

"CORALIE," adapted by G. W. Godfrey from "Le Fils de Coralie," was produced at the St. James' Theatre, London, May 28, but failed, and for the same reason that the original did—because the interest fell off in the last act.

MRS. BANCROFT, by reason of illness, was unable to play in "Masks and Faces" at the Haymarket, London, during the week ending June 4. Her place was supplied by Miss Marian Terry. "Society" and "The Lesson," billed for June 4, were postponed.

THE HANLON-LEES are on July 25 to begin a week's engagement in the Gaiety Theatre, London, prior to their departure for America.

H. J. BYRON did not play in "Michael Strogoff" at the Adelphi, London, during the week ending June 4, because of illness. His character was impersonated by J. A. Roster.

EDWIN BOOTH was to have made his last appearance in the Lyceum Theatre, London, June 15, acting Othello for Miss Ellen Terry's benefit.

MLLE. RHEA made her London debut in the Gaiety Theatre on the afternoon of June 2, acting Beatrice in "Much Ado About Nothing." Considering the short time she had been studying the English language, she was quite successful.

THE MEININGEN COURT COMPANY played "Julius Cæsar" in Drury-lane Theatre afternoon of June 3, for the accommodation of professionals. "Twelfth Night," produced on the second night of their season, gave much satisfaction.

MAY HERMON is now the lessee and manager of Astley's Theatre, London.

"JANET PRIDE" was to have replaced "Michael Strogoff" at the Adelphi, London, June 11.

— Miss Topsy Venn returned from Philadelphia to this city a few days ago, and is soon to sail for England.

— George H. Jessop is suing N. C. Goodwin Jr. in this city for royalties alleged to be due for playing bad "Ozone."

— There is talk of establishing a department of dramatic art in Harvard College. More Greek plays coming.

— Miss Rose Coghlan and Frederick A. Schawn and his sister Frances sailed from here for England on June 16.

— Gilbert and Sullivan have published the music and also the accompanying words of "Patience." This looks as if they think the esthetic craze worth but little for the American market.

— Lulu Veling of Pottsville, Pa., the youthful pianist, although she has only reached her thirteenth year, has made a phenomenal mark as an executant.

— At the request of Thomas S. Brennan, Herrmann, magician, and Henrietta Markstein, pianist, entertained the inmates of the R. C. Orphan Asylum, this city, night of June 6.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST HIGH-KICKERS,
GROTESQUE DANCERS AND ACROBATIC SONG-AND-DANCE ARTISTS,

COMPOUND EXTRACT
CUBEBS AND COPAIBA.

This compound is superior to any preparation hitherto invented, combining in a very highly concentrated state the medical properties of the Cubebs and Copaiba. One recommendation this preparation enjoys over all others is its neat, portable form, put up in pots; the mode in which it may be taken is both pleasant and convenient, being in the form of a paste, tasteless, and does not impair the digestion. Prepared only by TARRANT & CO., Druggists and Chemists, 278 & 280 Greenwich street, New York.

HUNDREDS TURNED AWAY IN CANADA

AFTER THE COUNTRY HAD BEEN SHOWED TO DEATH

IN THE FOLLOWING CITIES AND ON MY SECOND VISIT:

ST. THOMAS, CHATHAM, LONDON, WHITBY, LINDSAY, PETERBOROUGH, STRATHROY, STRATFORD, WOODSTOCK, BRANTFORD, INGERSOLL, BELLEVILLE, BROCKVILLE, OTTAWA, KINGSTON, COBOURG, ST. CATHERINES and TORONTO,

AND AT LARGER PRICES THAN ANY OTHER COMPANY.

THIS IS THE ONLY SHOW IN AMERICA THAT DARED GO THROUGH NEW ENGLAND AND BILL IN OPPOSITION TO BARNUM,

AND PLAYED TO BIG BUSINESS.

No one would take the date, JUNE 6, at the Alhambra, Boston, because Barnum's Circus was billed for that date. I accepted the date to prove that I could bill against the strongest opposition and put good business. BARNUM DID NOT AND CANNOT OUTBILL ME; and what was the result? STANDING-ROOM ONLY, AND IN RAINY WEATHER.

THERE IS NO FURTHER PROOF OF THE DRAUGHT OF ALVIN JOSLIN NECESSARY. I HAVE DONE WHAT NO OTHER ATTRACTION EVER DID, AND I DO NOT CARE TO PLAY ON SHARES, BUT PREFER TO RENT EVERYWHERE.

TIME FILLED FOR SIXTY WEEKS!

A CARD.

I take this opportunity of returning my heartfelt and sincere thanks to those envious and malicious would-be showmen, whose only ambition seems to do me injury by uttering condemnation against my entertainment. I call them would-be showmen because no professional worthy the name of man would talk against another company without the least cause or provocation. None but some unprincipled people would stoop to such a contemptible act; but this has been done. There is scarcely a town we play in but we hear of someone connected with the shows that follow or precede us, talking against my entertainment. And why? Because they fear me as opposition and envy my success. No one knows better than those shows who had the misfortune to follow "Alvin Joslin" the draught it has. While they were playing to starving business I was turning away people, and they claim to be first-class, solid attractions. If such be the case, why do they want local managers to play them on shares? Why do they want some outsider to risk his money? If the show is first-class it can draw, and IF THE COMPANY IS SOLID WHY DON'T IT RISK ITS OWN MONEY AS I DO. I don't want to play on shares anywhere—I prefer to rent. I ask no one to take any risk or chances. I prefer to take all the risk and make all the profits. This is the proof beyond a doubt, there is no lack of confidence in the drawing qualities of "Alvin Joslin." If my entertainment is not all I claim, why do the public patronize it? I am not trying to please showmen and deadheads; I cater to the public, the people who pay their money. Some newspapers say my play is no good, the public say it is. The newspapers are deadheads, the public pay—who is to be pleased? My bank account says the latter, and so shall it be. I am working for money, not glory. I have no favorite section of country or choice towns, as most shows. They are all alike to me. I play anywhere and against anything, and fear no opposition. This is the only show that ever billed after a circus had been thoroughly advertised, and played to crowded houses. Have billed against Adam Forepaugh, Sells Bros., Batchelor & Derris, the Great London, and the Barnum and London Circuses, and turned away hundreds. Can those shows who back-cap my entertainment show such a record? Why did those first-class shows go into Canada to escape the election campaign, if they are strong? Some did not even start out until it was over. My season commenced on the 30th day of August, and I went out in the face of the election, and went through the two worst States during the hottest of the campaign—Indiana and Ohio—and turned away people everywhere. And after Canada had been flooded with first-class solid attractions who dare not face the campaign, WE WENT THROUGH THE DOMINION AND TURNED PEOPLE AWAY EVERYWHERE. I APPEAL TO MANAGERS AND HALL OWNERS AS WITNESSES TO THIS STATEMENT. Can those people who run down my entertainment claim such a victory? No. And that is why they talk about "Alvin Joslin," because they are envious of my success. I have played more Jonah towns and run-down theatres and turned away more people than any entertainment in America. This proves "Alvin Joslin" is the strongest drawing attraction on the road, and it is because those fly-by-night companies and pauper managers, who worry themselves sick if it rains, and depend upon the receipts of one town to take them to the next, feel their insignificance beside an entertainment of the gigantic proportions of "Alvin Joslin," and can only take their revenge by using their venomous tongues. I need not name the many, many shows that have canceled towns because they dare not play before or after my entertainment—the managers who had them booked can best tell the sad tale—but, notwithstanding the abuse heaped upon me in my absence, I have return dates in every theatre where the malicious gentlemen have spoken the worst. This tells the story! Some of those antiquated old fogy showmen of the days of Noah bellow forth that it is the immense printing I use, and it is the wonderful way in which I advertise that fill the theatres, but that I cannot draw on my return. That is false. I have been in nearly every town twice, and in some three and four times, and my biggest success is where I have been before. Turned away hundreds at Heuck's, Cincinnati, my third visit. But it is my printing that draws. Why don't they do the same? Money will buy printing for anybody, and I pay one hundred cents on the dollar for everything I get, and I keep up with the times. I do not nurse and feed upon ideas of show business that should have been buried twenty years ago. I am continually adding to the strength of my entertainment. Notwithstanding I have the best advertised show on earth, I am having made one hundred new Lithographs, all in colors, and a stand of bills, four hundred and ten sheets, in five colors. I have everything the best, and my people have the best that money can procure. We stop only at the best hotels, have carriages to and from the depots, sleeping and parlor cars. There is nothing too good for my company. I have no partners, no backers. I am sole proprietor, author, manager and star. I run my own show and travel on the merits of the entertainment, and do not recognize THE DRAMATIC NEWS.

YOURS FARMINGLY,

CHARLES L. DAVIS,
